2. Make an earnest effort during your college course to become acquainted with some of the great books of the world. Read with some of the real thinkers and actors of history. Your various instructors are specialists in different lines. Seek their aid in pointing out the best books in their respective fields. A true College Library has as many librarians as the College has specialists. Consult with them.

3. Make use of the Library in all directions of your student activities. The Library helps you as members of literary, debating, scientific and engineering societies.

4. Supplement your class room and text-book instruction by reading other works, allied and related. Compare statistics, experiments, illustrations, lines of proofs and presentation, you will gain a clearer view and a more thorough mastery of your subject. You need rarely read from cover to cover. Every good book has an index and contents; learn to apply them.

5. Self-help should above all be cultivated. No student can afford to go through college without the knowledge and use of every day library tools, the Catalogue, Indexes, Bibliographies, Reference Books, etc

Two New Coaches.

John Gotwals '06, who is at present coaching the linemen up on New Beaver field, played on our noted 1905 and 1906 elevens at right tackle. He was honored everywhere as one of the best men at his position and yet one of the cleanest and most gentlemanly players in the college ranks. Struggling on the college teams during his freshman and sophomore years he finally made the varsity and was one of the main factors on "Mother" Dunn's '06 team, which was scored on only by Yale, tied with Gettysburg and won eight games in all, among the victories being those over the Indians, Navy, Dickinson and Pitt

Another excellent addition to our coaching staff is Saunders '04 who arrived about a week ago. He was varsity quarter during the seasons of '03 and '04 and called the signals in such games as the 22 to 0 victory over W and J in 1903 and the 11 to 0 triumph over Dickinson a year later. Altogether, the permanent coaches, Hollenback and McIlveen have been greatly aided by the return of "old men" to help instruct the big squad on Beaver field and it is confidently felt that more of them will respond to the call from their Alma Mater and aid in preparing the varsity for the coming battles with West Virginia and Pitt

Only Three More Games to Play.

Now that November, the final month of football, is at hand, our Blue and White team has but three games left to play. On Saturday Bucknell is met at Lewisburg in the first of these - a contest which stirs the hearts of Penn State men, old and young. That we are going to have easy sailing two days hence is not to be thought of, for the Orange and Blue has vowed vengeance for last fall's crushing triumph and their preparations for this game are such as to make the other contests on their football schedule appear almost trivial. To win from State is Bucknell's one cry!

Captain Coulson's eleven has won two games, lost the same number and tied one thus far this season. A glance at their record will show that Bucknell has not played consistent football but it does show that she has become stronger as the season waxed older.

Date	Score	Score
Sept 25	Bucknell 14	Susquehanna 5
Oct 2	Bucknell 6	Carlisle Indians 48
Oct 9	Bucknell 9	Gettysburg 3
Oct 16	Bucknell 6	Pitt 18
Oct 23	Bucknell 6	West Virginia 6

Last Saturday the Lewisburgers did not play but they were not idle for every available moment in the
