

The Mining Trip.

The 1910 miners made their inspection trip just prior to the Christmas recess and visited many of the most prominent metallurgical plants in the eastern United States. The first place visited was in the U. S. Mint in Philadelphia, where they saw the process of making gold and silver coin from the prepared metal. From here they went to the Bethlehem Steel Works, owned and operated by Charles Schwab, and spent half a day in the open hearth department. Two full days were given to inspecting the United Metals Refining Co., at Chrome, N. J., which is chiefly prominent for its output of copper. The most important point of the trip was the Raritan Copper Co. at Perth Amboy, N. J., which is the largest copper refinery in the world, having a daily output of 600,000 pounds of this metal. Other places visited were The American Smelting Co. at Newark, N. J., and finally the University of Columbia in New York City.
