A SECOND TIE GAME

State and Vermont Battle For Ten Innings Wit. Honors Even.

Penn State played her second tie game in succession with the University of Vermont on Tuesday. Darkness ended the game in the tenth inning. After the visitors had scored a run in their half of the tenth, Haddow singled after Eberlein had flied out; then umpire Cheeseman called the game with Hirshman at bat as it was 6:45 p. m. and the sphere could not be seen. The score reverted to the 9th inning, 4 to 4. McCleary tied it up in the ninth with a slashing double which brought in Kelly from first base. In the eighth Vorhis' clean single to right scored two runs and gave us a chance to even up things after an uphill fight in the final two innings. Klepfer went into the box in the tenth, before that Lynch and Haynes had indulged in one of the warmest pitchers' battles ever fought on Beaver Field. The contest was exciting from beginning to end and makes the first time in history that two tie games have been played in succession by a Penn State nine. The last tie game here was with Carnegie Tech in 1907.

"Larry's" action in pulling all the bats out of the bag in the ninth with two down and no one on base saved the day according to all the knowing ones; anyway, "Bud" went to second on William's bad peg and then came "Bull's" long hit that put us "in the game." Those spectators who left at the end of the seventh inning when the score was 4 to 1 against us and those who left at the end of the eighth when McCleary's team was still behind missed the very best part of the game. Moreover, their judgment might be considered unsound since Old State rallies her forces in just such a way as happened last Tuesday. There wasn't as much concerted cheering in evidence as usual either. Now, let us all pull together for the good 1910 nine which has not lost a game and can be counted upon to fight until the last man is put out in every game.

ACADEMY DEFEATED

Bellefonte Falls an Easy Prey to Capt. McCleary's Nine.

The inability of our nine to hit with men on bases, which was noticeable in the two Vermont games, was suddenly forgotten in the fifth inning of the Bellefonte Academy game here last Friday when a fusillade of hits and a comedy of errors netted the Blue and White ten runs. That inning told the tale of the recent contest and it spelled defeat to the hopeful prep school boys who had Twitmore, the former U. of P. twirler, on the rubber.

Workman, the first man up in the fifth, flied out to Jamison. Then Eberlein placed a nice hit through shortstop, Haddow got to first on an error of Jamison's, Hirshman hit to right for a single and Bien scored two men on his hit to middle. Jacobs' hit a hard liner to third which was dropped and Vorhis singled past third after "Shorty" Piolett had fanned and gone to first on Sterling's error. McCleary stung a straight ball for three bases and Workman hit one past third too hot to handle. Eberlein went out on a long fly to left; then Haddow and Hirshman reached first on errors and immediately stole second so that ten tallies had been made and Hirshman was the only man left on base when Bien closed the inning with a strike out.
