THURSDAY, JUNE 2, 1910

Mainly through the courtesy of the faculty of the School of Engineering, a club room and lounging place has been provided for the engineers of the upper classes in the Engineering building and in the course of the past two years this has proved itself to be of inestimable value to all who have enjoyed the comforts which it affords.

One thing, however, a thing of paramount importance to its successful maintenance, has been carelessly overlooked especially during the past term and that is the proper care of the club room and its furnishings.

Chairs have been wantonly destroyed and the floor thoughtlessly littered with papers and other varieties of debris. These things vastly impair the attractiveness of the room and perceptibly interfere with its advancement and growth. Next fall a new class, the incoming Juniors, will share the privileges of the other upper classes and a word of appeal to them now to give their ardent support to preserve the club room does not seem out of place. Make the club room what it ought to be, clean and comfortable, and we will appreciate its value to the fullest extent.

The Collegian takes pleasure in introducing three new associate editors who have been added to the staff during the past week.

W. P. Little, brother of A. K. Little a former editor-in-chief of this paper, has been elected from the class of 1912; C. W. Ulsh who was connected with the High School News at Lancaster High School, and B. S. Russell, Jr. of Ambler, Pa. are the 1913 men who have been chosen

These men take up their new duties immediately and we wish them a most successful and instructive career during their connections with the State Collegian.

President Sparks spoke yesterday in Philadelphia at the 25th Anniversary of the founding of the Central Manual Training High School of Philadelphia and of the introduction of Manual Training into the public schools of Pennsylvania.

During the past week he delivered Commencement addresses at Philipsburg, Butler, Waynesboro, and Plymouth, and will speak during the coming two weeks to graduating classes at the following points: Steelton, Rochester, New Brighton, Smeethport, Towanda, and Royersford.
