

with the most instructive and sociable meeting it ever held. This organization is a new innovation, meetings being held at various times during the year when experts on horticultural subjects are heard and questions of interest to all are discussed. As this was the final meeting of the term, some of the seniors graduating in the course in Horticulture gave interesting talks, all of which were of utmost interest to the men present. Prof. Watts, the head of this progressing department of Horticulture had slides prepared from photographs taken while on the recent Soils-Horticulture Inspection Trip through the eastern states and threw them upon the screen to give an idea as to what a great extent market gardening and fruit growing are carried on in the east. After good, helpful speeches by President Sparks, Dean Hunt and Prof. Agee, those present settled down to a delicious feed consisting of ice cream, strawberries, and cake, thus concluding the program of the evening's entertainment.

Positions of 1910 Engineers.

The School of Engineering has received applications for a very much larger number of men than could be supplied by the departments of Electrical, Mechanical and Industrial Engineering. Likewise, men are now being called for along the lines of Civil and Sanitary Engineering, and the number will soon equal those of the departments named above.

As a matter of interest, the demand for engineering graduates is greater than ever before in the history of the college.

The following is a list of the men who have thus far accepted places:

Agee, Howard, Instructor in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, Mass.

Beebe, L. H., General Electric company, Schenectady, N. Y.
