The New Paper.

Along with the rapid growth and advancement of the college and the further development of the various phases of the more important factors of the college life, the Collegian is striving to mould itself into an expansive publication for the explicit purpose being included in this college era of general progressiveness.

The Collegian has each year added some distinct improvement, until now the time seems to be at hand when it is practically beyond the work of human hands to make any decided change for its betterment. The fact stands, however, that in all of the larger universities and colleges throughout the United States, the college paper is published, not on the pamphlet style but in the regular newspaper form.

We feel that the hour is now born to put our paper on equal basis with those of the best institutions in the country, and to further make it of such quality and material that it may share excellent merits with the best of them.

What the Collegian now needs most is your unfailing support. The paper asks you for your hearty co-operation for its perpetual advancement and its general good, and further assures you that the feeling is preeminent with the editors, that the request for your assistance is not in vain.

We are offering you the paper just as it is and cordially invite your most severe criticism, yet not without the strong hope that it will find favor and merit some word of praise from all into whose hands it may fall.

Abolition of Class Colors.

Class colors are a thing of the past. How gratifying it seems to have shaken off the last vestige of any thing that was not entirely collegiate in every respect. The class color idea has been a custom that has grown up with an institution from its earliest day and one that usually clings until the college has grown to such gigantic proportions that it no longer finds favor and must necessarily be abolished. Penn State has gained sufficient in intercollegiate strength to adopt only those features and customs that comprise a large university and we cast this particularly disagreeable one aside with no feeling of reluctance.

Henceforth, the man who gains numerals or the man whose loyalty leads him to wear colors, will wear the blue and white of which we are so proud and the feeling that will come to him under the protection of this symbol will be one that stands for college, class and the best in life.

New Men Wanted.

As a result of circumstances unforeseen, W. H. Van Kirk, '12, and C. W. Ulsch, '13, will not return to college this year and the vacancies made on the editorial staff of the Collegian by these men will necessarily have to be filled in the near future. All juniors and sophomores who have had any literary experience or feel that they could do college newspaper work, are urged to mail their applications to the State Collegian.

The business management will also have two open places to be filled by competition and as these men are to come from the class of 1912, all juniors having a desire to be connected with the college paper, are requested to send their names to C. F. Preston, in care of the State Collegian.

Freshmen Track Trials.

Track trials were held last Saturday for the purpose of seeing what track material existed in the freshmen class and some satisfactory events took place. A number of men who have done good work in track athletics before entering here were not out for this meet, so during the fall, trial meets will be arranged to let the new men show their ability in this branch of sport.

The Civic Club.

Hon. John K. Tener—the Republican nominee for governor of the Commonwealth, Mr. Reynolds, the candidate for lieutenant governor, and Mr. Schener of Pittsburg spoke to the student body on Sept. 14 under the auspices of the Civic club. The gubernatorial candidates of the Democratic, Keystone and Prohibition parties have stated their desire to speak here during the fall campaign.

The Civic club is a link in a chain of similar student organizations extending throughout the colleges of the country. It aims to create a more general interest among the students of Penn State regarding the problems of good citizens life. To further this object, men of practical experience in public affairs are secured to address the club, and members take part by talk and discussions.

Regular meetings are held monthly. Special meetings, open to the public, will be announced from time to time. The first regular meeting will be held in room 20 Engineering building at 8 p. m. Friday, Sept 30. Membership is limited to upper classmen and total membership to sixty. Juniors and seniors desiring membership should have their names proposed at the time stated above.

Froth.

The Penn State Froth is now an accepted fact, due largely to the fact that the students so readily fell in with the idea of a comic publication and gave financial as well as moral aid. This year we purpose to give a bigger and better production to be published quarterly. We have secured the services of more literary men and cartoonists, who can ably handle the comic side of our college existence. However, there is room for more witty writers and cartoonists. One man is to be chosen from each the senior, junior and freshman classes respectively, and two from the sophomore class. Now, is the time to get that funny story out of your system; put it on paper and mail to J. M. Spangler, 608 W. College avenue. We also need a business manager to be chosen from the sophomore class. All men who wish to compete for this position see E. O. Arthur, Beta Theta Pi house. All manuscript to be in before Oct. 5th. Get busy wits. Let us hear from you.

Resolutions.

Whereas, the Almighty God in His infinite wisdom has found it befitting to take away the kind and beloved father of our most loyal and esteemed classmate, Harry G. Bickley, be it

Resolved, that we, the class of 1912 of the Pennsylvania State College do hereby extend our deepest sympathy to our classmate and his family in this, their hour of grief; and be it further.

Resolved, that copies of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, published in the State Collegian, and entered upon the minutes of our class.

Committee.

Be Economical.

When your Collegian subscription becomes due after the initial issue, pay for it before the expiration of the special $1.25 privilege.

Every man subscribes for the paper and if you want a detailed chronicle of your college events you will file every issue and at the end of the year have them bound in book form. This you cannot afford to do without, so to insure the proper delivery of the paper every week, make certain that we have your correct address and pay your subscription promptly. All checks should be made out to C. F. Preston, Mgr.

L. E. Schwartz Resigns.

L. E. Schwartz '11, of the business staff of the Collegian has handed in his resignation as a result of having too many duties to assume and properly carry his regular work. It is not without a feeling of regret that we accept it as Mr. Schwartz was a loyal worker to the interests of this paper, and gave his undivided attention to it during the past year.
