The order of leaving, the Auditorium has been very well explained by ours commanclant $d$ number of times, and if his plan were followed, these, would be no crowding and rushing. If we should make a visit to almost any other college, at least to any of win size and standing, we would at once perceive that there ate a number ( upperclass; especially senior, caustoms and traclitions which are stuckby adhered to. And what makes these customs permanent is the fact that not only the semis uphold them but the juniors and underclassmen also lend able assistance in supporting them. We would notice that at the close ut the chapel service all students $1 e$ main seated until the members of the faculty have passed out. Then the seniors rise and pass out followed by the other classes in then ofder. At Penn State, if a juno does not feel like waiting, he passer; out with the seniors, or a sophomore becomes a little impatient and files out with the seniors on jumps, and so on. Fellows, this practice should be stopped at once; fame each offender should be cmphatitaly notified, not only by the members of the class above hin, but by the members of the (las: 1 ) which te belongs.

Foresters Banquet.

Unbounded mirth and pleasure reigned at the board of the Nittany Inn on the night of Feb. 15, when sixty foresters sat down to the first annual banquet. The celebration was given by the 1911 and 1912 Foresters in honor of the return of Di. Baker to college. The fare, as sat down on the very autistic and classy menu cards was a source of classy menu cards was a source of great enjoyment to all, but more interesting still were the excellent talks given over the smoke rings by guests and ' undergraduates. Mi. Brunyate, president of the Forestry society, acted as toastmaster, and provided the banqueters with an interesting series of speech makers
Mr. Forsythe '11, expressed admirably the enthusiasm felt by all the men at the return of Dr. Baker, and welcomed him in the name of the upper classes to his former position. Mr. Schober '12, told the life history of "The Highwaymen's Club:" and of various other organiRations which are advancing the cause of forestry. Prof. Ferguson gave a most interesting and humorus talk on the interest shown by whir is peon work that is being done. Mr. Clark followed with a talk that was very pleasantly received. Prof Agee spoke of the way to get out of diffaculties that may arise, and gave some good sound advice to all the men. Dr. Buckhout descried in interesting manner the growth of the Forest School in the college, and the great progress forestry is makeing in the country Finally $\mathrm{D}_{1}$. Baker delivered a talk abounding with enthusiasm and with wise counset. His talk was encouraging and, satisfying, and aroused the feeling! among dill the mon that they were glad they were foresters and that they were again under the leadership of so fine a captain.
The banquet is significant not only for the fact that it shows the pleasure felt by the men on $\mathrm{b}_{1}$ Baits's return, but also that at inchcate, the point at which the men, for the first time, have felt strong enough to unite in such a manner. It maths a new stage in th = everopment of the, school, and shows that the cure is gaining continually in strength and unity
