The Wrestling Team Another championship has been won by a Penn State team. On last Friday evening by defeating Cornell our wrestling team gained the coveted title of "Intercollegiate Champions," and the prowess of Penn State men in another branch of athletic activities was most excellently demonstrated. This branch of college athletics, wrestling, was not inaugurated here until the winter of 1908-09 when only a single meet was held. However, since that time rapid advancement has been made, and last year application was made for entrance into the Intercollegiate Association. But after considerable discussion our application was turned down. As a result of this slight check to our ambitions in this line, our men, instead of becoming dejected and giving up hope, redoubled their efforts, and by long and consistent practice, an exceptionally strong team was developed with four clean-cut victories to its credit. It is no trivial thing for any kind of a team to defeat teams representing such institutions as Yale and Cornell and we have special reason to be proud of our wrestling team when we consider the fact that the trick was turned in our opponents' territory. In all probability another application will soon be made to enter the Intercollegiate Association and it seems very probable that our application will be acted upon favorably. Wrestling has been established upon a solid basis and has obtained a strong hold at Penn State. We honor every man on the team and rejoice together over the very successful season.

Appropriation Two weeks from to-day, March 30, the Appropriation Committee of the Legislature will visit the college, and the appropriation which the college will receive will be largely determined by the impression made at this time. There will be no change in the regular college exercises on this date, for it is the intention to take the committee around to the different schools and give them an idea of what the students here are doing, and at the same time demonstrate to them the congested conditions in the different departments as they actually exist. However if any student is personally acquainted with any member of the committee he should if possible avail himself of the opportunity of entertaining such a member. Let every fellow do his best at this time, so that the appropriation, which we so sorely need, will not be reduced one cent from that asked for.

Death of Dr. Hitchcock.

On February 15, in Amherst, Mass., there passed away, at the ripe age of eighty-two, the man who made possible American athletics, Dr. Edward Hitchcock.

He devised the system of anthropological measurements which is used today in all colleges in America and in many foreign institutions, and which has been known as the "Amherst Idea." In 1885 he helped found the American association for the advancement of physical education. For the first three years he was its president and for ten more years he served on its national counsel.

In 1901 this organization gave a dinner in his honor and passed the following resolution: "We express our judgment that the long continued and high place that has been given to physical training at Amherst has been one of the strongest factors in securing for physical training its present status in educational circles."

In 1905 the same association voted him an honorary member, together with Dr. Sargent of Harvard, the Crown Prince of Sweden, Prof. Angelo Mosso of Turin, Italy, and Prof. F. S. Schmidt of Bonn, Germany.

In this connection it may not be amiss to recall that the first intercollegiate baseball game was played as far back as 1859, between Amherst and Williams with a score 73 to 32 in favor of Amherst.

The Psychology of the Crowd.

Dr. George E. Vincent, president of the University of Minnesota in his witty, rapid-fire, and brilliant lecture on the "Psychology of the Crowd," captivated the large audience last Saturday night in the Auditorium to the extent that few will forget this entertaining speaker. In dealing with this subject which appeared to be a serious one, Dr. Vincent approached it in such a manner that he made clear to the most stupid the principles of psychology. The reason an eloquent speaker with a marvelous control of language can keep the attention of a crowd of people was readily explained in a manner most satisfactory and yet humorous.

Hypnotism or the concentration of thought was dealt with at length, but not practiced, Dr. Vincent telling how the mind can be controlled by one still stronger, providing the subject concentrates his mind on one thing, to the exclusion of everything else.

The substance of the lecture while deep and instructive, was not in the least tiring to the audience. Interspersed throughout the lecture were such ingenious remarks that the crowd burst forth in numerous rounds of laughter. The rapidity of Dr. Vincent's speech and his command of suitable words for expressing himself, combined with his remarkable flow of wit, stamp him as one of the best lecturers heard in the free lecture course.

Wireless Telegraph Investigations.

The experiment station attached to the college has entered upon investigations in cooperation with the Electrical Engineers of the Pennsylvania Railroad in order to perfect a system of wireless telegraphy to be used between stations. By means of other wireless stations, the idea of carrying out a practical line of research is excellent.

George O. Weddell '10, has changed his address from 11 West King Street, York, Pa., to General Delivery, Atlanta, Ga.
