Chalmers are three of the candidates that will make the champion exert himself to maintain his present reputation.

For the 158 pound class Dexter Very is almost a certainty. Dex has proved to be almost as great a wrestler as he is a gridiron star. Here too, competition will be strong. Gleason is a man who, under ordinary conditions, would make any college wrestling team. Lynn, also, will put up a strong fight for that weight.

The vacancy caused by the loss of former Capt. Lesh leaves a gap that will be filled only after a hard struggle between Elliot, Sayre, Kuhns and Dad Engle. All are good men, especially Elliot, Clark and Engle. The latter wrestled as heavy weight on the Varsity team of 1911.

For the heavy weight Levi Lamb remains from last year's team. McVean and Vogel promise to cause Levi trouble to hold his place on the team as do also one or two other promising candidates.

This year we are again fortunate in having the services of one of the best wrestling coaches in the country, Edward Lewis. Lewis, as instructor in this art is a find, as is shown by the type of teams that have been turned out yearly since he has taken charge of this line of sport. If we may judge from the present outlook and from the past achievements of our coach we may safely look forward to having the greatest wrestling team this year that Penn State has ever produced.

1915 Wins Wrestling Meet.

As was expected, the sophomore wrestling team defeated the freshmen in the Armory last Wednesday night by the score of 14 to 6. The freshmen however, put up a surprisingly good fight, much better than the score would indicate at first glance. Practically all the bouts were hard fought. The match brought out the fact that both classes have in them men who give promise for varsity material.

Miller '15 was given the decision over Williams '16 after 12 minutes of clever wrestling by both men. Miller's aggressiveness in the final period gained the decision. Brown and Clark won for the freshmen while Hill, Gleason and Stecker won their respective bouts for 1915.

Summary:

115 pound bout—Won by Miller '15 from Williams '16, decision, 12 min.

BY THE WAY.

Dr. George R. Parkins, secretary of the Rhodes Scholarship fund, gave the delegates to the Conference of American Universities to understand last week that the students, who represent America as Rhodes Scholars are not regarded by Englishmen as the best of America's embryo intellectualism.

Dr. Parkins came from England to suggest keener competition among students for the Rhodes prize. It was delicately suggested that there seems a waning of interest in the scholarships among American students and that it is felt abroad that the scholarships have been awarded too often to "specializing" students who are not representative of the best of American universities.

Since the establishment of the motion picture industry, undergraduates in many of the colleges are writing plots for the firms which make the films. Several Lafayette men have been successful at the business and have earned money on the side. It has been suggested that other men with literary inclinations should have the idea put before them.

This year's freshman class at Michigan can lay claim to the honor of having the most perfect physically developed woman for her age ever examined in the woman's gymnasium, according to Miss Catherine Bigelow, the director of physical training for women, who has just finished tabulating the measurements taken this year.

In an editorial, the Yale Daily News expresses the hope that no school of journalism will be inflicted on the university. The News terms such a school "socially lamentable" and "savoring of the business college."

Altoona School of Instruction.

Professor J. H. Hale, head instructor of the Altoona Instruction School, reports that there are two hundred and fifty apprentices in attendance. Another apprentice school has been established this fall by the railroad company at Altoona, and has an attendance of forty. It may be of some interest to know that these schools were inaugurated under the supervision of the schools of engineering of the college, and are being so conducted at present. Professor Hale was transferred from the college to the Altoona school, and has associated with Messrs. G. B. Wharen, and J. M. Yoder, both State men. These two schools are among those that are the most fully developed of their kind in the country.

A New Cafe.

Mr. L. C. Bullock is preparing to open a new eating place in the Holmes Block. From all appearances this place will be able to satisfy some of the wants of the hungry students.

Mr. Bullock is using a popular method in advertising his opening. He agrees to give the person or persons 100 tickets to the Pastime who guesses the name of the Cafe. The initials of the name are given as W—G—and the guesses are to be mailed to him before Nov. 22nd, 1912. One guess to a person. Mr. Harry Leitzell of the Co-op has been chosen to open the envelope on Pennsylvania Day, and at that time the winner or winners will be posted.
