

BY THE WAY.

Students of the University of Pennsylvania have organized a "Hardship Club" whose membership must shin up 20 foot ropes hand over hand, swim 100 yards, walk a mile in less than seven minutes and dip under the parallel bars ten times. They must sleep on the gymnasium floor, take a swim in the Schuylkill when the water is near the freezing point, get up at 3 a. m. for a ten-mile walk and in every way show contempt for fatigue, pain, sleep, cold, heat and everything else anybody doesn't like.

A fight between a member of the third class and one of the fourth class at the Annapolis Naval Academy is the subject of an investigation started last week.

It is said that Midshipman Lawrence, a fourthclass man, was compelled to do severe physical exercise known as "the 166" by a third class man. His performance did not please the upper classman, who, it is said, laid hands on the young fellow to make the command plainer. This was resented with a blow that led to a fight.

Should the upper classman be found guilty of the offence, his infraction would be plainly within the definition of "brutal hazing", which calls for dismissal from the service.

A Massachusetts Institute of Technology senior named Burdick had for his thesis the problem of making sodium sulphide by a process different from the one usually employed. In the presence of Professor Hayward and several students he made the experiment last week.

The mixture, inclosed in a half inch castiron tube a foot long, exploded and nearly wrecked the basement of the Rogers Building.

The explosion blew out a large plate glass window, wrecked the laboratory sinks, and burst a two-inch water pipe, which complicated matters by flowing for fifteen minutes before the shut-off could be found.

More of the students were injured, but the flash of brilliant red fire illuminated the whole section, and policemen came from all directions, expecting a heavy loss of life.

Professor Hayward told the student that he considered the experiment a failure.

Dr. Wyckoff, who recently moved to State College, brought with him two fine specimens of Moose or Mountain Maple which he presented to the Department of Forestry.
