Students, Commencement visitors and all friends of the college will appreciate the courtesy of Major General Leonard Wood in consenting to review the Regiment of Cadets at Commencement and to present the commissions. It is the first time that a head of the Army of the United States has visited this college, and is a signal mark of appreciation of the interest of the students in Military Science and the efficiency of the military details at the college. General Wood will be given a hearty welcome, not only because of his official rank, but also because of the important services he rendered to the country during the Spanish-American War.

As the college year draws to a close the desire of every class treasurer is that he may hand to his successor the book with every man paid up to date. This desire is rarely, if ever, attained, in spite of the fact that it is absolutely justifiable. There is no student who cannot keep his dues paid up if he wants to, and the cause of the present financial condition of the two lower classes, in particular, is due mainly to a certain type of student who can pay if he really wants to square up his account. This is very evident by glancing down the list of names of the unpaid. The type that responds to assessments is not the campus sport.

No one would claim for himself college or class spirit who pays promptly the assessments as they occur, for in this he merely performs the duty expected from him as a member of the class, but to the man who neglects assessment after assessment until the class finds itself embarrassed financially with unpaid dues amounting to a sum that could clear the bills twice over, comes nothing but contempt. What is gained by this negligence? Nothing. That no man can graduate with class dues unpaid is known, or should be known, by every one. There, therefore, can be no possible advantage, but on the other hand he sinks his class into a debt, causes forced assessments on the real students besides trouble and expense to the treasurer, and in the last year comes the inevitable financial tangle. Fellows, think this over and answer for yourself whether you are a benefit or detriment to your class, financially. You are one or the other. Which?

One of the essential factors of a strong college or university is a body of alumni who maintain interest in their Alma Mater and who individually or through their organizations take an active part in furthering her interests. The college has made and intends to make much of Alumni Day at Commencement, and by keeping in touch with alumni attempts to encourage intimate relations.

We have recently had a striking example of what can be done for a college and its organizations. The possibility of securing a western trip for our Glee Club was first suggested by E. G. Hollister '11, in the employ of the Santa Fe Railway at Albuquerque, N. M. The trip was finally secured largely through his efforts, as the reputation of the club was by no means known in the west. To accomplish his end, it was advisable for Mr. Hollister to lay the matter personally before Santa Fe officials and others, and hence the necessity of several trips as far east as Chicago, and one to Pennsylvania. Not content with having secured the trip for the club, Mr. Hollister joined the men at Chicago, and acted as business manager while traveling on the Santa Fe, having entire charge of the trip as far as railway, hotel and performing accommodations were concerned.

Such interest, even on the part of alumni and friends of the college, is unusual, especially when attended by such inconveniences and loss of valuable time.

The student body as a whole is to be commended for the manner in which our Monday election was carried on. There was apparently no electioneering whatever going on about the polls, the recent student council decision proving to be very efficient.
