

ANNOUNCEMENT

A Thoroughly Modern Drug Store for State College

A thoroughly modern drug store in every respect, a place where you will like to deal and where all your drug orders will be taken care of in a highly satisfactory manner. That is what I propose to give you.

In returning to my native town to open up a drug store I have borne in mind that the citizens and students of State College appreciate good service, therefore I want to assure you that all your drug orders will be taken care of promptly and efficiently. When you want anything in the drug line do not forget that Krumrine's is the place to get it.

Watch for opening day.

Sidney Krumrine

THE ELIGIBILITY RULES

Requirements to be Met to Play on Any Athletic Team—Are You a Progressive?

During the past two years much discussion and agitation has arisen within the student body and among the alumni concerning the eligibility rules governing the men who represent Penn State on various athletic teams. Among other things, the one year residence rule has received a great deal of consideration and its adoption has been urged and is still being agitated by the more progressive element in the college as the one big factor in putting an end to undue and unfair criticism received at the hands of certain sporting writers or rival colleges in athletics.

The adoption of this rule is urged as necessary to put Penn State in the proper light before the public and to secure for her the true standing in athletics, both of which she so fairly deserves and not infrequently fails to get. This agitation for more strict eligibility rules found expression in changes to go into effect this year. That all may understand the rules as they now exist and may use their influence in a way that they feel will better conditions at Penn State and for Penn State, the eligibility rules follow:

Sect. 1. No person shall represent this college in any athletic contest either at the college or elsewhere unless he be a bona fide student of the college.

Sect. 2. No student shall represent the college in any sport more than four years.

Sect. 3. No student entering the Pennsylvania State College from any other college or University shall be eligible to participate in intercollegiate contests until he shall have been in residence one full academic year.

Sect. 4. A student to be eligible for intercollegiate athletic competition must be fully matriculated and in good standing in any one of the four year courses of Collegiate grade.

FALL TRACK

Fall Trials Will be Held Soon. Martin Coach—Keyser Captain.

With the retention of Bill Martin as trainer for varsity teams and track coach, track athletics received a greater impetus in their rush to equal the standards set by other Blue and White Varsity teams. Martin, in his first term as track coach turned out the best all-round team that Penn State has ever had and there is no doubt that with him again in charge the coming season will see even greater strides in the development of track and field men at Penn State.

The Track team was lucky in that it lost only four men of last year's sterling performers. In this number are included the mainstays in three events, namely, Armsby in the jumps, Maybee in the pole vault, and Captain Lum in the mile. Fischer, who also ran in the mile, completes the list. Good substitutes remain to fill their places and with the material furnished by the freshman class should give Coach Martin plenty of candidates with which to work.

The team was also lucky in that it had such a man as Keyser to honor with its leadership for the coming season. The little two miler is a hard conscientious worker, who is popular with his team mates and the student body. Failure of the team to produce is not likely to be traced to the lack of an enthusiastic and hard working leader.

The usual fall trials for Sophomore and Freshman candidates will be held in the near future. Men interested in track and field work should watch for the first call for candidates and for the full details of the fall track campaign and cross country announcements, which will appear in a later issue of this paper.

VARSITY CANDIDATES

How to Avoid Unexcused Absences From Military Drill.

In the past more or less trouble has always been occasioned by men from the Sophomore and Freshman classes who reported for athletic teams without making any arrangements concerning their absence from regular Military Drill. They simply depended upon the manager, captain or coach of the team for which they were a candidate to square matters with the Military department. This sort of action not only causes trouble for both the athletic management and military department, but also results often in a man losing his chance to even try to make a team by being compelled to return to drill.

To avoid all trouble and unexcused absences all candidates from the Sophomore and Freshman classes for varsity teams must first hand their names to the manager or one of his assistants, but continue to report for military drill until notice of the excuse has been received from the Military Department through the Athletic Association office. Notices of all men excused from Military drill for Athletic teams will be posted on the Athletic Association Bulletin board along the main hall on the first floor of Old Main. Other prominent places where bulletins will be posted will be announced later.

All candidates for Varsity Football are to report to the manager or one of his assistants at the Track House any afternoon after four o'clock. Their excuse from military drill will then be arranged as soon as possible by the Athletic Association.

THE FOOTBALL OUTLOOK

Many Stars Lost by Graduation. Hollenback, with Reed and Harlow, Again the Coaching Staff. Martin Trainer.

The regular daily grind of the Blue and White candidates for football honors started on Monday at the call of Head-coach Hollenback. The next few weeks will be busy one's for all connected in anyway with the gridiron game at Penn State, for seldom has the Blue and White suffered as much from the loss of star men as in the season just past. The problem of whipping the team together is made more imperative by the fact that the Washington and Jefferson game to be played at Washington is not far off.

When 1913 graduated last June six of the thirteen varsity men of the 1912 season were lost to Penn State. Captain Mauthe, fullback, who did the punting, was a most reliable goal kicker both from the field and from touch downs, and was responsible for the long forward passes to Very and Wilson. To these assets must be added his indomitable courage as a leader. With Mauthe went Very, right end, almost universal choice for all American end, and greatest end by far of the year in handling forward passes; Wilson left end, only a shade less brilliant than his running mate. Engle, one of the greatest tackles Penn State has ever had; Whitney, another strong tackle, and Hanson, a guard who was always reliable. To fill these vacancies with men were easy, but to fill them with men who know the game, who can not only act but think quickly, and who possess not only fighting strength, but what is more good Penn State fighting spirit, this were a task great enough to test the powers of any coach or corps of coaches.

Seven men remain of last year's varsity. These will form the nucleus around which the coaches must build and mold a winning team; these will be called upon to bear the brunt of the battle for the Blue and White, especially in the early season contests. Heading this list is Captain Shorty Miller. His past performances are enough guarantee that the Blue and White will have leadership that is inspiring and courageous. Next in point of experience stand "Big" Clark the versatile pivot man and "Red" Bebout, the most aggressive guard Penn State has had for years. On the right side of the line, the giant tackle Lamb is left. Back of the line, besides Miller, there remain "Punk" Berryman the dashing, line crashing halfback, and Welty his reliable running mate, and Yegg Tobin the remarkable "pinch hitter" of the backfield.

Of last year's second string men there remain several who will no doubt land varsity berths and help to fill the vacancies. Of the linemen Vogel and McVean seniors have seen most service, while Sayer has proven his worth. These men with Miller, '16 should help to solve the tackle and guard problem.

Fisher, subcenter is also again on the squad. Behind the line material is most plentiful. Langdon, Weston, Welling, Shupe, Vogt, and Craig have all seen more or less varsity experience, while Tevlin, Yerger, and Wood are promising men from last year's freshman team. Probably the greatest problem facing the coaches is that of filling the places of Very and Wilson at end. Experienced material is not plentiful. Barron is probably the most promising candidate. The former varsity backfield man should fill one of the wing positions capably. Besides Barron there are Stewart, Devine, Sarver, and Weston.

The last and most uncertain source of material is found in the Freshman class. Northeast Manual and Central High of Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Allegheny, Harrisburg, Atlantic City, Johnstown, Greensburg, and Williamsport High School, Indiana Normal School, and Mercersburg Academy have all contributed their quota of men prominent in prep school athletics. It is up to those who have joined the squad to try for the team, to forget their prep school reputation and make good. To those who have the ability and physique or either, and have not reported, we would say "Take a bigger draught of true Penn State Spirit, ask the manager for togs, report to the coach on the field, and show the stuff that's in your makeup."

Summarizing what has thus far been said many would conclude that the outlook is not bright. But no mention has been made of one of the biggest assets in Penn State's football successes, namely her coaching staff. At the head stands Big Bill. Enough is said when we note that in his three years at Penn State, no defeat has marred the record of the Blue and White on the gridiron. The resourcefulness of Coach Hollenback will go a long way toward the success of the season, where a coach of less ability would surely fail. He is not alone in his work nor will the success be due to his efforts alone. No head coach can boast a better corps of assistants than is afforded him in chaplain Bob Reed, former Princeton All-American tackle, Dick Harlow, star tackle of the undefeated Blue and White eleven of 1911, and Trainer Bill Martin, last season's successful track coach and formerly a star backfield man on the elevens of Whitman College, Washington and Notre Dame University. Upon the ability of these men to produce a winning aggregation Penn State followers pin their faith for the success of the Blue and White on the gridiron in 1913.

The football schedule for this season follows:

October 4, Carnegie Tech. at State College.

October 11, Gettysburg college at State College.

October 18, W. & J. college at Washington.

October 25, Villa Nova college at State College.

November 1, U. of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

November 8, Notre Dame at State College.

November 15, U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis.

November 27 (Thanksgiving) Univ. of Pittsburg at Pittsburg.

The schedule arranged for the Freshman team follows:

October 18, State College H. S., at State College.

October 25, Indiana Normal School at Indiana.

November 1, Bellefonte Academy, at Bellefonte.

November 8, Mercersburg Academy at Mercersburg.

November 22, Sophomore-Freshman Game.

Captains of 1911 and 1912.

Captain Mauthe of the victorious team of 1914 is now big chief in the football camp of the Pennsylvania College, at Gettysburg. The big chief has dug up the hatchet and our eleven may expect a warm battle, when the battlefield boys come on New Beaver.

Captain Very of the famous 1911 team is now head coach at Mercersburg. With his experience and his knowledge of pig-skin tactics, he will undoubtedly turn out a good team at the school. They will be strong opponents for our 1917 men, if the two meet.

THE 1913 FOOTBALL CAPTAIN

With Miller at the Helm Penn State's Gridiron Warriors Are Assured Excellent Leadership. New Captain Strong in All Departments and Popular, Both On and Off the Field.

With the election of Eugene E. Miller, as captain at the end of the last football season, the 1913 Blue and White eleven was assured of brilliant and popular leadership. "Shorty", as he is popularly known, has made a reputation among the football stars developed in the last two years and was chosen by many critics as the 1912 All American quarterback. He came to Penn State from Harrisburg High School, where he started his football career and captained the team in his senior year. Upon entering Penn State in 1910 he reported for the team and soon made his presence felt by his "pepper" and ability to carry the ball. Since then he has played in every game but the Gettysburg game of last season, when he took a necessary trip to Philadelphia with Coach Hollenback.

Captain Miller.

"Shorty", while at Penn State has developed into a phenomenal player, strong in all departments of the game, and no man was ever better qualified to lead a football team. His broken field running has been one of the brilliant spots of the big games of the Blue and White during his three years as a player. He could not only carry the ball for big gains but was one of the most successful quarterbacks in the county in the use of short, quick forward passes. Likewise in catching and returning punts he had no superior. During the 1912 season he was not guilty of fumbling a single punt.

Better than his material aid to the team and that which makes him especially fitted for leadership was the generalship he displayed at the pivotal position in the big games. Time and again yards were gained and touchdowns made due to the ability of the midget to outguess his opponents and pull off the unexpected. Besides his ability to play and direct plays, he possessed the rare faculty of being able to carry his laurels and honors modestly, at the same time being full of pepper and good fellowship to the extent that he is one of the most popular of captains that any team could possess. There is no doubt that insofar as leadership is responsible the Blue and White team of 1913 will be a success.
