The Great Convention

The greatest Student Volunteer Convention that the United States, and possibly the world has ever experienced, was held at Kansas City from December 31 to January 4. Students from over 800 institutions were present, and this in itself is plain evidence that the great movement which this gathering represented is far reaching.

The entire atmosphere of the convention was extremely inspiring, and although Penn State had a representation of 25, it would have been extremely beneficial for every student to have had the opportunity of coming in contact with the excellent men who gathered there in the middle west. The entire spirit promulgated was one of unselfishness, and a plea was made for unselfish missionary work throughout the country, and above all throughout the world.

Men of international fame such as Dr. Mott, Dr. Speer and Mr. Sherwood Eddy, by consistent addresses pictured the religious, moral and social conditions existing in some of the foreign countries, and they made an appeal for student volunteers to go forth into these countries and by means of their labor to better and revolutionize the environments of human habitations.

It must have been apparent to every delegate at this great session, that happiness is really found in serving others, and in making the lives of others more ideal and healthy. The addresses made were not designed to play upon the emotions, but were constructed of indispurable evidence, and they clearly pointed out to every one calling himself a Christian, the duties and obligations which Christianity carries with it.

The eminent leaders in this movement made clear that the world cannot stand and progress upon materialistic standards, but that spiritual and idealistic foundations are absolutely essential to human welfare. This powerful reaction constituted a potent force in stimulating thought along religious and spiritual lines. and the evidence is striking that every man attending this wonderful conference, came back with a deeper insight into life, and a determination to use his ability to better advantage.

The tendency in scientific colleges today is for the student to become too materialistic in his attitude toward life. It is a fact, brought out by some of the world's greatest philosophers, however, that the spiritualistic and religious frame of mind is necessary for general happiness.

In February Mr. Sherwood Eddy, who has done such commendable work in India, will lead a big campaign at State College. An urgent appeal is made to every student to participate in this enterprise, which will be instituted solely to confer the greatest religious and spiritual benefit upon the greatest number of students.
