With the demise of A General James A. Great Loss Beaver, former Governor of Pennsylvania, and up to his death, the President of the Board of Trustees of the Pennsylvania State College, this institution has lost one of its most sincere and greatly beloved friends. General Beaver, who for so many years has been so prominent in the affairs of the great Keystone State, has for a long time been one of the great instigators of progress and reform at the college. He knew the institution when it was practically nothing more than a farmer's high school. For a time, he acted as president of the institution, and ever since he first affiliated himself with its interests, the college has grown both in numbers and in the scope of its influence, until today it is one of the prominent institutions of the state.

General Beaver who was so well known and beloved by the student body, made it a point to join every freshmen class. His addresses at the opening of every semester, will never be forgotten by the true Penn State men. Ex-Governor Beaver has always loyally supported this college, and he has always been the true friend of the students.

It is with great grief that we go into the new semester, missing as we do, the presence of our beloved friend, but nevertheless we feel that his spirit will remain with us, as we proceed.

The collegian herewith takes the opportunity of expressing the great regret and sorrow of the student body, and of offering its sincere condolences to the family of the late General James A. Beaver.

The campaign instituted and promulgated by the Penn State Y. M. C. A. this year is one of the most eventful in the history of the institution. Mr. Sherwood Eddy of world prominence was a man difficult to secure, but owing to the persistent efforts of Mr. Buchman, our secretary, Penn State is fortunate in having him here as the principal speaker and leader of the great religious reform movement.

Men today devote little enough of their time to the spiritual, and here an opportunity presents itself for men to redeem themselves, and for them to create an interest in the ideal and higher things in life. If a man will only be open to conviction, and will attend these meetings only in a receptive mood, he will find that it does not take long for him to conceive the proper spiritual attitude.

Most of the world's greatest philosophers and thinkers, most of the world's greatest statesmen, and the majority of the world's greatest scientists have concluded that a christian life is the only life. If the leaders of our country take such a stand, can we as students afford to take any other. Think this matter over, and come to all meetings.

It is with pleasure that Varsity the first issue of The Club Varsity Club Bulletin has is announced. This paper is printed by The Varsity Club of which. R. C. Harlow '12 is president; R. H. Smith '05, is treasurer; E. E. Miller '14 is vice-president; and A. H. Wardwell '15 is secretary. The club is composed of active and former Penn State Athletes, and its publication is to stimulate interest in athletics. The club with its work, is a very commendable enterprise, and the Collegian Board wishes the new organization the best of success.

BASKETBALL TRIP
 Team Completes Successful Trip. Jester Plays Star Game.

The team returned from the strenuous western trip in fairly good shape last Thursday. The trip throughout was a success from every standpoint, the team continuing to show the form exhibited in the Wesleyan game previous to their departure.

Three teams were met, two defeated and the third game was so closely contested that only the finely drawn decisions of the referee nosed us out of the victory. Individually the men showed great improvement in floor work and shooting. This was particularly through Jester whose general work throughout the trip was noteworthy. Of the 30 goals secured in the three contests 14 were credited to our center. Binder played his characteristic game, and his elusive footwork and accurate eye caused his heavier guards no end of trouble. Injuries during the Pitt game caused him to be removed from the game, acting captain Savery proving an able substitute by scoring 14 goals out of 17 chances. The guards also were in the limelight, and it was only by their consistent and close following of the ball that we were able to hold down the fleet W. and J. and Pitt teams from a larger score.

The first number of the Penn State Mining Quarterly of the Mining Society recently came from the press. The Editor-in-Chief G. J. Salmon with his able corps of assistants, and Business Manager C. S. Kulp with his assistant have issued a very creditable number. It consists of 50 pages on Mining, Metallurgy and Geology. It is well illustrated with photographs and contains several pages of local and alumni notes. This issue contains several articles by leading men in active work in mining and metallurgy and the idea is to continue this practice by having articles from alumni and men in practical work of mining, metallurgy and mining geology.
