Wednesday, April 1, 1914

One of the most regrettable features of the amendment which removed two year men from varsity sports was that a large group of men ceased to derive the benefits which accrue to varsity candidates. The two year men have removed this feature by the formation of an athletic association which staged their first program last Thursday.

The association is exceedingly well organized as was shown by the efficient management of their first meet held during the previous week. It consists of the regular offices with an advisory board chosen from the most prominent athletes in the college. The varsity coaches and trainers have volunteered their services in helping to make this movement a success.

These men are matriculated in a branch of our college and are considered to be Penn State men. They have much good material in their classes and will turn out good teams. Would it not be of value to interclass leagues to issue them an invitation to membership? The interest in the leagues would certainly be strengthened. Perhaps some good athletics who showed promise could be induced to change their course. No doubt in time games outside of college could be played but in the infancy of the association it would seem imprudent to take on such burdens.

The two-year classes are to be congratulated on one point at least, namely, that they have realized the need of organization and met that need on their own initiative. No such organization exists in any class of the four year course.

The need of an organization for intra-mural athletics has been considered for sometime. Why not meet that need?

In a December issue readers of this paper will be urged to present preparatory seniors the claims and advantages of State College. Since that time, due to the activities of State graduates and undergraduates, numerous students having the necessary State qualifications have had their attention turned to our college. More than this has been accomplished for many men of both high scholastic and athletic attainments have signified their intention of entering State in September.

To paraphrase a forceful statement of a recent speaker: "If our college is worthless, let us set about to improve it; if it is the best in the land, as it undoubtedly is, then let us build to keep it where it is."

During the coming vacation most of our readers will rub shoulders with ideal State men in the making. If any one of them has ability in scholarship, literary or athletic lines speak to him! Urge him! Tell him the truth about State and he will be here in September.

Many school principals will open the doors of the school to you. Let no stone remain unturned! Open the valve of State spirit and boost!

Dan A. Poling Coming

The people of State College will have an opportunity on April 5 to hear Dan A. Poling, one of the most impressive speakers on the liquor problem in the United States today. Mr. Poling will be here at that time in attendance at the Pennsylvania Intercollegiate Prohibition Association Convention, April 4 to 6. He is vice president of the National Association and holds offices in many similar organizations. As a former Oregon College athlete, having starred in football, track and basketball, in which latter sport he was for a time champion of the Northwest, Mr. Poling particularly appeals to the college student; as a man he is attractive in his strong personality; as a speaker he is winning in his logical fairness, thorough mastery of his subject, and oratorical skill.

Mr. Poling's coming presents an opportunity to every student to learn the different phases of the liquor question and no one can afford to miss hearing him. All persons are welcomed at any or all of the following meetings:

Saturday, 1:30 p. m., foyer of Auditorium, address of welcome, Dean Arthur Holmes; response, State President Joseph F. Landis, Juniata College; educational work of the W. C. T. U., Miss Grace Hendricks, Philadelphia; report of college leagues; business meeting.

Saturday, 8:00 p. m. Auditorium, annual oratorical contest.

Sunday, 3:00 p. m., Old Chapel, conference led by Dan A. Poling on the study of the liquor problem and methods used in opposing the liquor traffic. 6:30 p. m., Y. M. C. A. meeting, speaker, Dan A. Poling. 7:30 p. m., Methodist Episcopal Church, union meeting of the town churches, speaker, Dan A. Poling.

Monday, 8:00 a. m., room 226, Old Main, business meeting, annual election of officers.

Spring Cross Country

Next Saturday at three o'clock, the first annual cross-country race will be held under the joint direction of Coach Martin and Director Lewis. The race is open to all men who are not on the track squad at the present time and is to be a handicap run. Merchants of the town have generously contributed prizes in order to increase the interest.

The primary object of the race is to bring out men who can run but who have not, up to the present time. The interest in the sport is on the increase. Already State is in the intercollegiate association and because of this every effort should be made to lift her name to a prominent point. Underclassmen participating will be excused from drill for the balance of the semester.

Football
 Spring practice will begin next week under the direction of Harlow. Any man who expects to get any recognition or attention should hand his name to Manager Lord at once.

Head-coach Hollenback was in town long enough to discuss the 1914 football situation with Coach Harlow and Captain elect Tobin. Fall practice will commence September 10th., three weeks prior to the opening game.
