After a short closing address by General Secretary Buchman the afternoon session was closed by a general prayer. Every man was deeply impressed and inspired by the events of the day and went away feeling as Hatfield did when he remarked during the day that if a man has latent powers and possibilities he is making a great mistake if he wastes it away on some "peanut job". To help every man find these possibilities and utilize them in the right way is the resolve of every cabinet member.

Y. M. C. A. Reception for Freshmen
One of the most elaborate receptions to the freshman class is planned by the Y. M. C. A. for Friday evening. The event this year will take place on the front campus where more than a hundred Japanese lanterns will be placed for this occasion alone. The college band will render a concert throughout the entire evening and a number of selections will be rendered by the Glee Club. More than a score of refreshment booths will be established at various places over the campus and a hearty welcome will be extended to the class of 1918. A plan is under way by which the freshmen can be distinguished from sophomores and upper classmen. This idea has been adopted in order that not a single freshman will leave the ground without a hearty handshake by the old men. At this reception the new men are all given an opportunity to meet the president of the college and the leading men in student activities. The freshman reception is one of the rare treats to every class and without a doubt the one planned for Friday evening will surpass all previous years.

Freshman Bible Class

No freshman who comes to Penn State can afford to miss the opportunities for developing true manhood that are offered by the freshman bible class. Upper classmen of past years join in saying that it was by far the most valuable training and experience of their freshman year. This class meets every Sunday morning immediately after the freshman chapel exercises. Noted men and educators from all parts of the country address these meetings. As a part of the program for Sunday upper classmen and sophomores will speak at the session and tell what the class has meant to them in past years.

Men of 1918, there is no one college activity or any one thing at Penn State that will do as much for you during your freshman year as the freshman bible class. If you are looking for a real live meeting stay for this class on Sunday morning.

Class Prayer Meetings

This year on Tuesday evenings there will be a class prayer meeting for each of the four classes. This is a new scheme as heretofore only one meeting was held for the four classes. It has been deemed advisable to have four classes from now on. This will give each man in attendance an opportunity to speak before his own classmates, if he so desires, on his interpretation of the Christian life. It is hoped by having the classes meet separately that greater interest and enthusiasm will be shown in these Tuesday evening meetings.

Departmental Notes.

Dr. Eaton of the School of Mines spent a great deal of time during this last summer in Geological research work in the East Nittany Valley.

Many improvements have gone on in the Agricultural Group this summer, the Agricultural library has been transferred to a much larger and more commodious room. The library is a very important factor in the work of the school and this change, it is hoped, will greatly increase its efficiency.

The Acknowledged Best

The old Stock judging room in the basement of the main Agricultural building is being altered and furnished for a students clubroom.

Prof. H. D. Pallister was with the Caisos Mining Company of Terlingua, Texas during vacation. His work was in quicksilver mining, and had to do both with engineering and metallurgy.

Prof. L. J. Youngs had charge of one of the parties engaged in the Wisconsin Geological Survey this summer. The object of the work was to make a magnetic survey of the state and to determine its mineral resources.

The stock judging pavilion, erected at a cost of 30,000 dollars, is now complete and will be used for classes right away.

Prof. W. D. Roberts spent his vacation in the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia, in work for the Scarborough Map Company.

The Horticultural Building has been finished. Prof. Kains is now here and in charge of the department.

The Ag. Hill skyline is still further altered by the new dairy barn which is now almost complete. When finished it will be sanitary and well ventilated, one of the finest barns anywhere.

Track Candidates

All candidates for varsity and class track teams should report on New Beaver Field Saturday at 1 p. m. in running togs. At this time preliminary try-outs will be held in all events and new men with any ability should be present. Notice of fall practice hours will be posted later.

Sophomores—Notice.

All members of the class of 1917, who wish to enter the competition for assistant managerships of baseball, track, lacrosse or tennis should register at once at the graduate manager's office, 120 Main building. Registration closes November 16.
