POTASH SUPPLY LIMITED.

At the outbreak of the war the shipping season for potash from Germany was at its height, but since then the shipments have been made only in limited quantities. The prospect, however, is that they will increase as time goes on. Potash is not contraband of war and none of the nations at war objects to its movement in neutral ships. There is, however, great difficulty in securing railway and river equipment to move it from the mines and storehouses to the coast.

The mines are in good condition and enough workmen not subject to military service are available to keep them in operation.

The interruption of traffic has not made American soils or crops any less hungry for potash.

Most of the leading fertilizer manufacturers have agreed to utilize their present supplies of potash in the effort to supply fertilizers with at least two or three per cent. of potash next spring and the supplies on hand at the outbreak of the war were said to be sufficient for this purpose. There is, therefore, no reason why farmers should not secure some potash in their goods, although the usual five to ten per cent. might not be obtained.
