GETTYSBURG TEAM CALLS A HALT

Howard's Pitching Features Game. Hits Few And Scattered. State's Field Work Erratic. Play Juniata Today.

The Gettysburg nine last Saturday called a halt on Penn State's winning pace by taking the winning side of an interesting game. The steady, effective pitching of Howard, together with the poorly placed hitting and erratic fielding of the State players might serve to summarize the reasons for the loss of this game.

States only run was scored in the second inning when Robinson doubled to left field, and soon afterward scored on a single by Kaunas. The succeeding innings found the Blue and White players unable to tally, although several times in rally they came close to turning the game. The men were able to hit the ball, but found difficulty in doing so safely.

Hesselbacher opened his work on the mound by striking out three of the first six men to face him. His pitching, although wild at times, was on the whole steady; and he netted at the close of the game, a total of 10 strike-outs. The work of Kaunas around second base prevented a number of probable run-scoring hits.

The Gettysburg men played steady baseball throughout. They came here with a splendid record for the season, having been defeated only by the Princeton team, and exhibited a game which indicated effective coaching and thorough team work. Their hits were well placed and came at points in the game when they were most needed. During the opening innings they went out in successive order; but in the third inning McKee doubled to left, took third on a bad throw, and scored later on a wild pitch. Three hits, accompanied by a costly error in the sixth inning practically decided the game. Only two of the five runs were earned runs. Much of the credit for the success of the game is due Howard, who allowed but few safe hits.

Final score: 5-1.

Interclass Debating.

The annual interclass debate will probably take place this year on Friday evening, May 14, in the Auditorium. The sophomore and freshman teams are hard at work collecting materials and preparing for the debate. The subject to be discussed is one of great national interest and of extreme importance. It is "Resolved, That immigrants to the United States should be required to pass a literacy test." Prof. Roberts is coaching the sophomores while Mr. Hall is getting the freshmen into shape.

The baseball team leaves today to journey by automobile to Huntingdon where they will play Juniata college. Next game here will be with Carnegie Tech. on May 8.

Seniors to Meet

There will be a senior class meeting in Old Chapel tonight at 6:30.

All groups, fraternities, clubs or societies desiring booths at the Junior Prom are requested to notify E. D. Maltby, Beta Theta Pi, not later than Friday of this week.

DR. SCHIEFFELIN AT STATE

Prominent Business Man of New York City Speaker at Both Chapels. The speakers at both chapels last Sunday were Dr. Schieffelin of New York, and Mr. Moorland, secretary of the work in the south for the uplift of the negro population. Dr. Schieffelin in the morning chapel presented many interesting accounts of the negro uplift work which was first started by Penn State in Virginia. The first secretary among colored people was Mr. Randall, a graduate of Hampton institute, who was supported by the students of our college. Owing to the death of Mr. Randall, the secretaryship is now vacant. It is planned, however, to create the office of national secretary and have him supervise the work done by local secretaries supported by the negroes themselves.

Mr. Moorland described the methods of work carried on among the people, and pleaded in a forceful manner for a universal brotherhood, such as has been demonstrated by our student body in supporting its mission in the south. At the 6:30 meeting, Dr. Schieffelin spoke on "The By-products of a Business Man." It will be remembered that he is a typical man of affairs who devotes much of his time to work other than business, and out of which he realizes much that business can not bring him.

Candidates in the two lower classes for advertising manager of Froth should report at 423 Main Thursday at 6:30.

IMPORTANT LEGISLATION FOR FRIDAY NIGHT. THREE PRIZES TO BE OFFERED

Rules For Government of Interclass Athletic Contests to be Presented. Nominations For Officers of the Athletic Association—New System For Cheering to be Considered—Athletic Association Offers Prize Under New System of Cheer Leading—Collegian Offers Prize For Best Song of Year.

One of the most important mass meetings in Penn State's recent history will be held next Friday night at 6:30. The first show at the movies will be suspended in order that a good turnout can be had.

A new system of cheer leading will be voted on. It will embody the following features:

1. A board of five senior cheer leaders in place of one.
2. Uniform motions by all men leading the same cheer.
3. The five men to be chosen by the graduate manager and the present cheer leader and in following years by the graduate manager and the board of five.
4. At the regular Athletic Association elections the students will ballot for the best man of the five who will receive a prize of $10.
5. The five cheer leaders to receive expenses to the Pitt game and these expenses to be apportioned by classes.
6. A prize of five dollars will be awarded for the best cheer.
7. A prize of five dollars for the best song of the year.

Other features will be added before Friday night. With this new system it is hoped to improve the cheering which has become too large a position for one man. Other suggestions for improvement which will be acted upon include the massing of the Glee club to lead singing and the playing of snappy music by the band.

Another important matter for consideration will be the adoption of the Interclass Sports Council constitution. This is presented with the hope that money will be saved in outfitting athletic teams of the various classes and also to help in the making of schedules, eligibility rules, and in selecting officials.

The proposed constitution provides for a committee of four, one man from each class, with the athletic association officers members ex-officio. The graduate manager is to act as treasurer of the council and all purchases are to be sanctioned by him. Every man in a four year course is to be assessed annually a sum of one dollar and in return is to receive free admission to all interclass contests except the freshman-sophomore scrap games.

The plan seems to be particularly good, for based on an admittance charge of 10 cents, $2 worth of athletic contests are furnished at a 50 per cent. discount. It should also be remembered that the usual charge is 15 cents.

This tax of $1 will also eliminate a number of class assessments which are made to equip athletic teams. A number of men have given considerable time to the forming of the rough draft of this constitution and with this to work on it is hoped that the student body will take this opportunity of systematizing this rapidly growing form of college activities.

The new cheering system as proposed should assist in increasing college cheering. At present the grandstand body appears to be reluctant to cheer at all and act as a sort of damper on the two bleachers. If the Glee club would sit in the grandstand possibly it could imbue it with some cheering ability.

The prizes for the cheer leader, the best cheer and the best song will be awarded next spring. Any man may submit more than one song or cheer and each one submitted which has any merit will be printed in the columns of this paper.

Juniors Win

The juniors won their first game in the class league Monday by defeating the strong freshmen team by the score 5-2. Both teams had their strongest lineup on the field and the junior battery of Miller and Baughman proved too much for the underclassmen especially in the pinches. The game was marked by good baseball and several fielding chances were above the ordinary. The pitching of Baughman and the hitting of Miller for the juniors and the batting of Wheeling for the freshmen were the features of the game.

Class Baseball League Opens

The class baseball league opened its season last Saturday when the Sophomores beat the Seniors on Old Beaver by the score 4 to 3. The game was as the score indicated well played, in fact one of the best that has been seen here this year. Both pitchers showed good form and with the exception of the third and fourth innings the game was a pitcher's battle. The seniors showed the best form, due to the fact that the sophomores' lineup was shifted so much.

A home run by Kern was the feature of the game.
