WESTMINSTER IS NEXT OPPONENT

Weaver, Former State Star,
Is Coaching That Team,
and Result Will Mean
Much—"Pete" Maute Here.

The second act of Penn State's 1917 football show will be staged on New Weaver field next Saturday afternoon when the Westminster college eleven will be the attractive opponent of the Western Pennsylvania team, this game is expected to be an entirely different calibre than that played here last Saturday.

The Westminster team is being coached this year by a former Penn State star, "Hem" Weaver, and the game that the visitors will play will be entirely different, it is thought, than that played by them here in the opening game last year when State won by a score of 27 to 0. The Westminster team which played here last year was one of the headiest football tackles ever turned out at State, and he is bound to have installed some of the Penn State style of play into the Westminster team which can be used to advantage against the Blue and White. Weaver played a star game at tackle for Penn State all four years he was in college, in '10, '11 and '12, and had a very good reputation as a player even before he came to college.

He was a teammate of Dick Harlow's and State's coach speaks very highly of his ability. Weaver was coach of the Freshman team here in 1912. With the exception of the Westminster quarterbacks they will bring the same team here for the game Saturday that opposed State here last year. Some new material and Weaver's coaching have strengthened the Westminster team and a much stiffer fight can be looked for than State was given last year. The result of this game, then, will be eagerly looked for by all lovers of the game interested in State's prospects, for it will give a good line on a comparison of the strength of this year's team with that of last year's Westminster team. A particular star in the person of captain McLaughlin, who has put up one of the hardest fought games at tackle that State players had to contend with last year.

MAUTE AND VERY BACK
In her preparation for the balance of the season, the State team will be benefited to a great extent by the volunteered assistance of some of the old stars who are drifting back at a time to aid Head Coach Harlow in rounding the team into undefeatable form. "Pete" Maute, who was a Penn State student of recent years, is spending this week with the squad helping "Pete" Very with the backfield. "Pete" Very will be absent from camp Monday to do his share with the line men and from now on some one or other of the old stars will be in hand nearly all the time that is spent in building a first class combination. These men have been on Penn State teams that have never known the meaning of the word "defeat." The old star work hard to get that old spirit instilled in the present squad.

FACULTY OF MINING SCHOOL SPENDS BUSY VACATION

A number of the faculty of the School of Mines spent their vacation in practical field work in different parts of the Continent.
Professor Weigel, of the department of mining, had charge of the design and erection of a polyblende concentrator in Northern Ontario.
Dr. Eaton, of the department of geology, spent part of the summer in geological work in the oil fields of Oklahoma.
Professor McQuigg, of the department of metallurgy, was engaged in experimental metallurgy for Baldwin Locomotive works at Lewistown, Pa.
Professor Northrup was engaged during the summer by the Cambria Steel company at Johnstown in the Open-Hearth Steel department.
Professor Dudley spent part of the summer in Montreal in connection with electric furnace work for the treatment of zinc ores.
Mr. Cathart, Penn State '12, and a teaching fellow in geology last year, now has charge of the geological field party in the Oklahoma oil fields.
Professor Weigel has a paper on the illuminating powers of various mica sheets lamps in the August Bulletin of the American Institute of Mining Engineers.
Vacancies in the School of Mines Faculty have been filled by Mr. C. W. Robinson, instructor in geology who comes to the school from Yale and the University of Iowa, and by Mr. S. J. Caudill, a graduate of the University of Kentucky, who has been a teaching fellow in geology from practical work in the oil fields of Kentucky and Tennessee.

CAPT. CHAFFIN AT THE BORDER

CAMP HARRY J. JONES, DOUGLASS, ARIZONA, Sept. 1, 1917.
Dr. L. E. Sparks, Pennsylvania State College, Pa.

My Dear Sir—With the arrival of September 1st, my fondest thoughts carry me back to State—to the bell ringing out that a new College year has opened, to the boys, jolly and light hearted but serious and faithful; to the fraternity houses where Mrs. C. and I always found a smiling welcome, to the serious faced and stoop-shouldered "profs," loaded down with the distinction of coming recommendations, but, in fact, wondering why he believed that "stude" who cut section after section gave an excuse that his granddaddy had another—the seventh of this semester—stroke of paralysis, and to the "Hepp" Hep of young you Hinderling, coming to the university jointing American boy to the step of the rate of "one hundred and twenty per minute," to salute the "Prose" with proper dignity and respect. Al, but I would love to hear those naughty Sophs, the keepers of College Customs, and their college roll for the "Hepp." Well might my thoughts be turned to these, in contrast to adobe and canvas covered buildings here, sterile plains and barren mountains, and the association of restless men of arms eager for a call to active service for a righteous cause or a return to more attractive surroundings.

I am sure that with the loyal support guaranteed by the students, the officers to operation of the faculty, and the efficient and ever present commandant the military department, at the college this year will be a great success. I'd like to tell the boys to "get back of" the Commandant this year and make a record that will put to shame those smaller colleges and the distinguished places of the past. The officers of the military department will be glad to share with you the intelligent awakening of the American nation to the necessity for no longer neglecting one of the vital needs of a respected country. Iur should remain a nation without the organized mind and mental force to maintain our dignity and respect of other nations, the responsibility rests with the coming generations under the leadership of such men as State's moulding and turning out into the world. If we continue as in the past, we shall back our words with more and longer words, if we continue with no nationalism to boast of except the deeds of the few founders of the Republic, and those situated through vicissitudes of the Civil war, they, these students, are the ones who must shoulder the responsibility.

I have a small athletic mansion with two rooms, but in contrast to State—in which to enroll Mrs. C. and our "hope" upon their arrival Sunday from San Antonio. I habitate a tent upon chili con carne, frejolias, tortillas, enchiladas, etc., and satisfy our artistic desire on desert mirages and dreams of "God's country."
Mrs. Chaffin joins me in the very best wishes to you, Mrs. Sparks, Miss Ethel and our many other friends at State, and in the most of your fondness in parasitics (Graham's delirious), we ask to be occasionally remembered in our misery and famine. Sincerely yours,
A. H. CHAFFIN,
Captain 35th Infantry

NEW CURFEW LAW FOR BENEFIT OF PENN STUDES

Curfew shall ring this year at the University of Pennsylvania. Students who have been accustomed in the past to "go home by the light of the moon," in the early hours of the morning, will find this term that University officials have placed a thumb in the path of the undergraduate who finds the pale glow of his study lamp dim and unsatisfying and yields to the lure of Philadelphia's ever bright downtown district.
Beginning with the opening of the University this fall, the big iron doors at the main entrance to the University dormitories at Thirty-seventh street and Woodland avenue will be locked at 10 p. m. After that hour students who wish to get into their rooms in the dormitories will have to ring an electric bell just before the lock is engaged and wait until the watchman opens the gates for them. The student who wishes to effect a quiet entrance to the dormitories after 1:30 a. m. will find the new ruling a stumbling block that can be avoided only by jumping the fence which separates the dormitories triangle from the Botanical Gardens.
Heretofore the main dormitory entrance was always open. University officials declared yesterday that students would still have entrance to their rooms at all hours and that the new ruling was aimed only to keep out sneak thieves.

PROHIBITION LEAGUE TO BEGIN ACTIVITIES EARLY

The Penn State branch of the International Prohibition League, composed of students who are interested in the liquor question, is making its plans for the coming year, when it hopes to attempt even more than it did last year. The officers for this year are D. S. Adams, '17, president; H. G. Nussler, '17, vice president; G. S. Beck, '17, treasurer; and W. Wood, '17, secretary.
As he did last year, Dean Blaisdell will conduct a study class at the meetings which will be held by the Prohibition League in the library every Monday night.

COLLEGE OPENING RUNS OFF VERY SMOOTHLY

The 1916-17 college session got away to a good start last Thursday morning when the students here crowded the campus with almost 1600 students. The fact that the session opened over a week later than was originally planned from the fact that the students returned and ready for the formal opening at 8 o'clock. The opening went along the campus in time to get signed up at the student union building. The usual brief address and followed it with his introduction of the new members of the faculty. Dean Holmes made the announcement of a final college cheer was given for "Bill" Wood who was present as a member of the faculty.

In January, 1917, but applications should be on file in the war department long before that date. Now is none too early.

1916 TRACK CAPTAIN WAS RECENTLY MARRIED

Walter R. Mason, '17, track captain and record holder, was married to Miss Kathryn M. Harvey, of State College, on Aug. 21, at Likton, Md. The wedding, which was announced recently at a reception given at the Harvey home, came as a surprise to the numerous friends of both young people.
Mr. Mason, who was employed at the Allison Manufacturing company this summer, was entered in the Middle Atlantic Championship races which were held at Meadowbrook, Pa. While attending these races he met his bride-to-be and went to the mercy of lovers in the state of Maryland, where the knot was tied.

TIDAL VARIATION IS FELT BY WELLS NEAR THE COAST

In their investigation of the underground water resources of the coastal plain of Virginia the geologists of the United States Geological Survey have collected data relating to the many hundreds of artesian wells that yield excellent water in large areas of the coastal region.
The variation in flow exhibited by these wells with the rise and fall of the tide is of peculiar interest, the flow being much greater at low tide than at the ebb tide. It is the general opinion among well drillers that practically all flowing wells near tidal rivers or inlets to the sea are affected by the tide, but some of them so slightly that the variation in flow is not noticeable.
The geologist in charge of the ground water investigations in Virginia states that changes in water level in wells, due to fluctuations in the height of the surface of some neighboring body of water, have been observed in the district under investigation. It is clearly impossible owing to the depth of the wells and the nature of the intervening beds, some of them being of marl and clay, to find these beds, however, though they do not transmit water, nevertheless contain it, and as water is practically incompressible any variation of level on the part of the water table and the level through the water filled gravel, sand, clays and marls. When a porous bed is tapped by a well the water rises to the point of equilibrium and fluctuates as the hand of the ocean varies its pressure on the beds that confine the artesian flow.

BUSY TIMES IN SIGHT FOR CADET CORPS

Detailed instruction next semester. Captain Ahrens will arrange the schedule in such a manner that the second year men will be enabled to drill for four consecutive hours, thus accomplishing the work of a week within a single morning or afternoon. With such an arrangement it would be possible to take the sophomore companies out on the point of embarkment and there work out actual problems of warfare in the field.
Insofar as it is possible during the present year, the companies will be drilled by lieutenants and the sophomore companies by captains. In this manner the junior officers will gain the maximum amount of experience in handling and directing the men.
Another advance planned by Captain Ahrens is the organization of engineering and machine gun corps, sometime during the year. These divisions of the regiment will be organized in a manner similar to that of the signal and hospital corps. Through the National Defense Act it will be possible to secure complete equipment for the new corps from the federal government.

PAY FOR OFFICERS

The Act also provides for the payment of members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps during their military training. Section 50 of the Act, which reads as follows:
"When any member of the senior division of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps has completed two academic years of service in that division, and has been selected for further training by the president of the institution and by the professor of military science and tactics, and has agreed in writing to continue in the Reserve Officers' Training Corps for the remainder of his course in the institution involving five hours per week, to the military training prescribed by the Secretary of War, and has agreed in writing to pursue the courses in camp training prescribed by the Secretary of War, he may be furnished, at the expense of the United States, with commutation of subsistence at such rate, not exceeding the cost of the garrison ration prescribed for the Army, as may be fixed by the Secretary of War, during the period of his military training." The Act makes it possible for members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps upon graduation from college to be enrolled as members of the Reserve Officers' Corps and as members of the latter corps to serve with the regular army as a temporary lieutenant for a period of six months.

THE NATIONAL DEFENSE ACT
The National Defense Act, referred to in the preceding paragraphs, has given extended scope and influence to the military department in the life of the college. Under the provisions of the Act, units of what is known as the Reserve Officers' Training Corps may be established upon application at any land-grant college or university. The corps as outlined in the Act will be made up of students, who, having completed two years of compulsory military training or the equivalent, desire to continue the study of military science.
The Secretary of War is authorized to prescribe standard courses of theoretical and practical training for units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps and institutions at which units of the Corps are maintained will be compelled to adopt into their curriculums the prescribed courses of training, devoting an average of at least three hours per week per academic year to such training. As yet regulations for these courses of training have not been published.
Under the new Act a total of 300 companies of military officers and 500 non-commissioned officers will be available for duty at the various institutions maintaining units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps. The number of officers detailed to any one institution is left to the discretion of the president.
MUCH EQUIPMENT AVAILABLE
The new Act does away almost completely with whatever difficulty may have existed heretofore in securing proper supplies and equipment for the cadets. Section 47 of the Act reads:
"The Secretary of War, under such regulations as he may prescribe, is hereby authorized to issue to institutions of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps arms, ammunition, public animals, arms, equipment, and means of transportation as he may deem necessary, and to forage at the expense of the United States public animals so issued."
Members of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps under the provisions of the Act will receive practical military instruction in summer camps for units of the United States Government. Section 48 of the Act reads:
"The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to issue to units of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, for such camps to be maintained for a period longer than one week in any one year, except in time of actual or threatened hostilities, to transport members of such corps to and from such camps at the expense of the United States so far as appropriations will permit, to submit them at the expense of the United States while traveling to and from such camps and while remaining therein, so far as appropriations will permit, to use the Regular Army of the United States military forces as a part of the military training of such corps and to authorize, in his discretion, the formation of companies units thereof into battalion and regimental units."
