our hotel and have long since ceased to attract attention. Just when I begin my work in the camps is uncertain. I have no orders as yet from Washington as to time and itinerary. Meanwhile as you may imagine under present conditions I am not worrying but am "playing hooky" from school with a clear conscience. I presume I shall begin at Camp Johnson, a nightmasters' training camp near Jacksonville. I know there are Penn State men there.

No doubt the next COLLEGIAN will tell of the "get together" movement. I feel sure it will be a success. With all good wishes for everybody, I am,

SOPHOMORE GIRLS LEAD IN INTERCLASS BASKETBALL

In the third game played between the girls' interclass basketball teams last Wednesday night the Sophomores defeated the Juniors by a score of 9 to 4. Miss Hoy, the Sophomore center, was the individual star of the game, scoring three field goals and totaling six points in all for the Sophomore team. Miss Scudder of the Juniors also played a good game. This victory makes the second for the Sophs and gives them the lead in the league. There is great competition among the various teams and the girls are rapidly improving in their team-play. The line-up—

Juniors—4	Sophomores—9
Hilleman	F. Scudder
Scudder	F. Scudder
Jenkins	C. Hoy
Bemis	G. Richter
Mater	G. Richter
Field Goals—Scudder 1, Hoy 3, Richter 1. Foul Goals—Hilleman 2, Graziar 1. Referee—Martin.

TO TRAIN BOYS HERE FOR SUMMER WORK

Penn State Men Will Aid In Instruction of City Boys Here and Will Be Camp Leaders

Plans are now being made whereby several hundred boys and young men from high schools of the large cities of this state will be brought here next spring for a short period of training in farm work, after which they will be put on farms to help out during the great labor shortage.

Immediately after the close of the present semester a number of students of the School of Agriculture will take a few days' training and then they will aid in the instruction of the boys who come here from the cities; and they will become camp leaders when the boys leave here for the farms.

The object in bringing these young men here is threefold. First, it is hoped to develop them physically and make them better able to stand the work which they will be called upon to do when they get out on the farms; second they will be taught some of the fundamental principles of farm practice, so that they will not be as incompetent as were so many of the city lads who went onto farms last spring; and third, the proper attitude toward the work will be shown what they do on the farm is just as patriotic as the work which their older brothers are doing in the training camps or in France.

Upon the completion of the two week's course here, the boys will be sent to farms in various parts of the state where the need is greatest. While on the farms they will live in real camps. There will be twenty-four boys, a Camp Leader and a cook in each camp.

L. H. Dennis is in charge of the Farm Camps in this state. He is working under the direction of the Committee on Public Safety. Authorities in the big city with, and they are all sympathetic with the work and are doing all they can to help it along.

With the Girls

Miss Margaret Falconer, of Sleighton Farms near West Chester, Pa., addressed the girls of the four classes on February seventh. A large number of work being carried on there. She urged as many of them as possible to consider this work, and it is possible that some of the girls will go there this summer.

Miss Florence Tutthill, Secretary of the Inter-Collegiate Bureau of Social Service, who was at Penn State for a short visit last semester, was here again on February eleventh at which time she told the women students about the various kinds of social work that are being carried on at the present time in the large cities.

NO SETTLEMENT IN MOVIE QUESTION

This has been a matter of long standing in which we have exercised the fullest patience. This year, as in previous years, we first appealed to the student body through one of its leading representatives; then, after a particularly marked incident of disorder during which some property was destroyed and children in the audience were endangered, we made an appeal through a leading college official to the Student Board and were informed that the Student Board advised an appeal to the various classes through their presidents. All of these persevering efforts having failed we approached several leading students personally regarding the matter asking them kindly to refrain from any practices that would disturb the enjoyment of other visitors to the theatre who had paid their money and had full right to the privilege of seeing the play undisturbed.

"All of these efforts covered several months, and were all based upon the theory that an appeal to the fairness and gentleness of the student body would succeed.

"However, it was asserted by some students that they did not know that better order was desired. Therefore, in order to furnish this information and in order to make our position absolutely clear, we made the announcement on the back of Saturday's program.

Made An Issue

"Contrary to what we expected and hoped, we were informed from various sources that the students had determined to make this an issue and would visit the theatre with the firm determination not only to promote disorder but to carry the issue to the extreme. We were further informed on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, that the situation would be critical, that efforts would be made to destroy our business entirely, even if necessary, with the destruction of property. Color was given to these reports by the disorder on Monday evening and by the shout of "boycott" raised on two distinct occasions. Finally we were informed that Wednesday evening, February thirteenth, was the evening chosen by a group of people who had thoroughly determined upon their plan to break up the performance by noise, disorder and any other means in their power, and were advised by some to secure police protection.

"Under these circumstances we were placed in the most difficult position imaginable. We did not know how much faith to put in these reports. If they were true and we took no steps to protect ourselves our business would be ruined. If they were not true and we took steps to protect ourselves it might precipitate deep unpleasantness. We knew that there was no police protection available in the town to prevent the raid. Therefore, we made the only other appeal we could. We asked that state police be sent on that evening in plain clothes, quietly to take their places in the audience and in case nothing happened to remain quiet. This we did because we had no desire in any way whatsoever unnecessarily to irritate the large number of the student body who were wholly innocent of any disorderly intentions. However, a sensible desire for common safety not only for our own property but for the lives and limbs of innocent spectators compelled us to take these precautions. This we were compelled to do by our responsibilities to the public and the State. If any one been injured and had we taken no proper precautions for their protection we could have been held liable by law and prosecuted in the courts. Knowing all this, we undertook to prevent what the public, the college and the student body themselves ought to prevent to prevent and we undertook to prevent it in the kindest and wisest way possible.

Appeal In Uniform

However, and this is the point we wish especially to emphasize, because it is the key to all succeeding difficulties, some things were wholly innocent of any disorderly intentions. The officers not only appeared late but appeared in uniform, upon instructions of their superior officers. Immediately the students in the theatre rose in a body and left the building. Everybody is familiar with the overt acts which followed. We endeavored to do nothing more than maintain peace and order. The state police were instructed by us merely to stand guard and to refrain in every way from any actions that would in any way precipitate the riotous and disorderly conduct of the theatre and obstructed the public highway nothing was done. When they further illegally attempted to organize a boycott and march through the town it was endured. And further when a small group returned at midnight and in order to furnish this information and in order to make our position absolutely clear, we made the announcement on the back of Saturday's program.

"The next morning the signs painted and placed on the campus in calling for a boycott, the signs in the town and especially the defiance of our store, convinced us further that the evil intentions were not limited to the theatre alone but were intended to include our other business and holdings as well. That convinced us that if we hesitated had passed. No other course seemed open to us than to take the vigorous steps demanded. Even then, though we might have lodged complaint against many men, upon more serious charges, we selected only three most active in the affair and lodged complaint against them. These men were accordingly arrested. However, ever the effect upon the student body was, or however unjust this action may have appeared to them to be, quiet followed.

Stay Proceedings

"As soon as we were convinced that the seriousness of the whole situation was appreciated by the student body, and that they had reached a determination not to forward the plans of destruction which were said to have been formulated by a few, we expressed ourselves to be quite ready to stay proceedings.

"Ventures were made to the counsel of the three students arrested, and by his suggestion conferences were held and the proceedings against the students stopped. We did it because we were fully assured that the past actions of these students were repented of and we were to be condoned and that we were assured that in the future every effort would be made to maintain good order. Therefore, the practical issues, as far as we are concerned, are settled.

"The third issue, however, remains. That is the feeling aroused in the student body by the actions which they saw. Our motives and purposes in these actions, as far as we controlled them, we believe have been wholly misunderstood. We have not, as we showed above, been precipitate in our appeal to the law. We have been patient and long suffering. We have used and have exhausted every means we had at hand; we have not asked for money reimbursement for the property damage, we have always endeavored to understand and to satisfy students' tastes in matters of plays, by giving them high-toned classic productions. The free use of our theatre with its equipment for certain educational films, the allowance of benefits for certain student activities, and other familiar actions, we need not call up at this moment. They are sufficiently known and we feel certain to care appreciated by those who enjoyed their benefits. Finally, we reiterate, that when we were moved by what we considered justifiable fears for the safety of the public and our own business, to an appeal for adequate protection, we made that appeal and attempted to carry that protection into effect in a way that would cause the least irritation and would cast the very least reflection upon innocent spectators.

"The next morning the signs painted and placed on the campus in calling for a boycott, the signs in the town and especially the defiance of our store, convinced us further that the evil intentions were not limited to the theatre alone but were intended to include our other business and holdings as well. That convinced us that if we hesitated had passed. No other course seemed open to us than

and upon the reputation of the college. The only appeal that we make is an appeal to the fair-mindedness of the student body and public concerned. We have not gone into useless details. Neither have we stated all the facts, some of them important facts which stand in our favor. We have endeavored to be brief, but fairly, state our motives in this whole, much-regretted situation, and we trust that this statement will appeal to the sense of fairness of those who read it and will remove from all minds any wrong feelings that may have been caused by an insufficient knowledge of the whole situation.

Student Board Resolutions

Student Board held a special meeting last Thursday afternoon and drew up the following set of resolutions:

Since it is contrary to law and inimical to the best interests of the college to organize or to advertise a boycott against any legally conducted business, the Student Board, the officially constituted body in the student government of the Pennsylvania State College, met on February fourteenth, 1918, and took the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, a number of unknown members of the student body have taken steps to boycott the moving pictures as conducted by Maurice Baum in State College, let it be hereby

RESOLVED that the Student Board disclaims any responsibility for authorizing, organizing, or promoting such a boycott; and be it further

RESOLVED that the Student Board disapproves of the boycott signs placed upon the college campus or elsewhere; and be it further

RESOLVED that, since it is contrary
