PRICE FIVE CENTS

DR. CHARLES ZUEBLIN TO GIVE LECTURE SERIES

Will Also Speak At Union Religious Service On Front Campus Sunday Evening

Beginning next Monday, July 8th, at 7 p. m. in the Open Air Theater, Dr. Charles Zueblin, publicist, of Boston, will give a series of four lectures on the general topic: "United States, Peace Maker or Peace Maker." Dr. Zueblin has also been secured to speak at the first union religious service to be held on the front campus Sunday evening at 7 o'clock; his subject at this time will be "Fellowship."

Dr. Zueblin has had an interesting career. He was born in Pendleton, Indiana, May 4, 1866, the son of John Evans and Henrietta (Follett) Zueblin. His paternal ancestor emigrated from St. Gallen, Switzerland, to Savannah, Ga., in 1736. His mother's family came of New England-Hugenot stock.

Charles Zueblin was educated in the public schools of Philadelphia and the University of Pennsylvania, and after graduation from the Northwestern University in 1887 (Ph. B.) he took a post graduate course at Yale University (D. B. 1889) and at the University of Leipzig (1889-91). He founded the Northwestern University Settlement in Chicago in 1891, which is doing a splendid work among the immense foreign population of the northwest side. In 1891 he founded the Chicago Society for University Extension. Although this society is no longer in existence, it was the prototype of the magnificent university extension work which was carried on from Chicago under the auspices of the University of Chicago, from 1892 to 1912. When the University of Chicago was started in 1892, Zueblin was made instructor in sociology; by 1902 he had been advanced to a professorship, a position he held until his resignation. During the sixteen years he was at the University as an instructor, his main work was in the larger field of public life. A portion of each year was devoted to lecturing for the Extension department of the University. His expert knowledge of American cities is largely the result of these and subsequent lecture journeys, covering 750,000 miles of travel.

During the past two decades few men have contributed more to the civic awakening of our country than has Dr. Zueblin through his lectures and writings. He is frank and outspoken in his criticisms of economic and social abuses, and scores of towns owe to him their impetus toward higher civic life, and thousands of individuals have received from him a lasting inspiration to clearer thinking and more useful endeavor.

Dr. Zueblin is now an independent lecturer on democracy in literature. (Continued on Page Four)

SUMMER SESSION STUDENTS TO PRESENT MEMORIAL

For the past few years, the summer session students have been raising money each summer in order to some time present the Pennsylvania State College with a suitable memorial. That time has apparently now arrived. Sufficient money has now been raised by the students of the last several summer sessions, and plans are under way to have erected a large seat, in the shape of the letter "S". The memorial will likely be placed on the campus west of Old Main, between the Old Main Building and the Armory. Plans for the "S" have been drawn up by a member of the faculty of the school of engineering, and while they have not passed the official board, it is very likely that they will do so, and work commenced on the new project in the near future.

The pageant which is presented annually on the front campus by the summer session students, will this year be written by Miss Sparks. ANNUAL SUMMER SESSION OPENS

Enrollment On Tuesday Evening Was 558—Will Likely Exceed 700 Mark

The ninth annual summer session for teachers at the Pennsylvania State College was officially opened Tuesday morning at ten o'clock when the first general assembly was held in the Schwab auditorium. After the usual opening exercises, consisting of the singing of "America" and the reading of the invocation, Dr. Smith, director of the session, briefly commended the teachers for coming to college for further training at such a critical time, especially when there is such opportunity for earning money at this time.

Dr. Edwin Erle Sparks, president of the college, also commended the teachers for their coming here, saying that it showed their interest in education; he then went on to show the work of Penn State during this war, explaining what the college has done thus far, what it intends to do, and then pointing out the service flag, significant of the fact that over 300 of the Pennsylvania State College faculty and students are already in the service of their country. Dr. Sparks' main point was that in time of war, the up-keep of the civil life and education of any community necessarily devolves upon the women, since most of the men are either called to the colors, or have some other branch of the service to take care of. It is therefore essential that the women keep prepared, and the teachers who go to college during the summer months are the ones who are doing this; upon them the leadership of their communities will devolve.

Enrollment

The enrollment of school teachers at the summer session at the close of Monday, Registration Day, was 477; at the close of Tuesday, it had reached 558. According to Dr. Smith, there is every indication that the total of teachers enrolled will go beyond the 700 mark, which is but slightly inferior to the number here last year. What is more encouraging, however, is that more have enrolled this year thus far, than were enrolled last year at the same time, namely the second day after the opening of the session. From the application blanks which had been received at the summer session office during May and June, preparations were made to take care of from seven to eight hundred teachers.

The war has had, naturally enough, something to do with the decrease in enrollment. Last year, this was especially noticeable since the session opened scarcely more than two months after the declaration of war. As a result everything was in a more or less chaotic state, but due to the efforts of Dr. Smith and Dr. Sparks, the summer session was held as usual, and the enrollment totaled over 800, despite the disturbed conditions of the country. This year it would seem that the attendance would be greatly decreased, and yet the facts show that the exact reverse has

RETREAT

Retreat is observed by the U. S. enlisted men, here for training, every evening at 6 o'clock. It consists in sounding the bugle and lowering the flag on the front campus. All male civilians who are on the campus at that time are requested to remove their hats and stand at attention until the flag has been lowered.

SUMMER SESSION MEN TO RECEIVE MILITARY TRAINING

At a meeting of the men attending the summer session, held Tuesday afternoon in the Old Chapel, it was decided to give military drill to all men who desire it. About twenty have volunteered to take the work. The time will be at 3:30 p. m. daily except Saturday and Sunday, the period covering either a half hour or an hour. The men will be drilled by 1st Lieut. Andrew J. Whinery, of the Field Artillery, Reserve Corps, who is one of the officers stationed here with the U. S. Army detachment.
