A CORRECTION

In its report of Dr. Eli Mayer's lecture last week, the COLLEGIAN in speaking of the Jewish people said: "This characteristic lack of uniformity and at the same time this bond of unity is real" at the heart of this world war. President Wilson, in his remarkable message, stands for united nations, but one nation dominating all and making all uniform to it." This last sentence should have read: "President Wilson, in his remarkable message, stands for united nations, not one nation dominating all and making all uniform to it."

SUMMER SESSION TO CLOSE FRIDAY

of students were here for this branch of study.

The demonstration school was another successful feature of the summer session work. This school was designed to supplement the courses in the principles of teaching, school administration and supervision, and especially the courses in special methods in elementary school subjects. The classes were conducted by specialists and student observers were admitted to see how such model schools were conducted.

SUMMER SESSION BRIEFS

An interesting feature of the ten o'clock assemblies has been the conducting of the singing by the members of the class in chorus conducting. These teachers are being trained to go home and conduct "Community Sings," thereby promoting the movement for a better community spirit which can best be fostered by having the people sing the songs of the country, home and heart. A motto for all: "I hear America singing." Will you do your share?

Dr. Margaret MacDonald, who has been on leave of absence for the past half year, has taken up her work in agricultural chemistry. Dr. MacDonald spent part of her vacation in inspecting chemistry laboratories in eastern colleges.

Dr. Henry E. Jackson, Special Agent for the United States Bureau of Education at Washington, D. C., was the speaker at the last union religious service of the 1918 summer session held on the Front Campus last Sunday evening.

PROFESSOR MELVILLE TO MEET THOSE INTERESTED

The movement to rehabilitate and make adequate provision for those handicapped in this war is being reflected in our educational life. The Public Charities Association of this state is working for adequate legislation to make provision for handicapped pupils, including the difficult types who are handicapped by environment. The Association is also organizing a state wide system of school clinics to assist in securing adequate treatment or provision. This may include placement in the right institution or special class.

Professor Melville, of Philadelphia, who worked on special phases of the problem in Army Camps and Naval Stations is with us today. He has been asked to assist in stimulating the movement throughout this state for special provision for the handicapped and difficult pupils. He would like to meet those who would welcome cooperation in organizing a school clinic or in providing for handicapped pupils in their vicinity. Professor Melville will be in Room 121, Old Main from 1 to 3 this afternoon or later if he receives word through the Director's office to expect you later.

PROF. ERNESTI PRAISES PENNSYLVANIA ARTISTS

Professor Richard Ernesti, of the department of industrial and fine arts, was the speaker at general assembly on Monday morning, his subject being "Pennsylvania Artists." Prof. Ernesti paid a high tribute to Pennsylvania, saying that she had produced many of the best artists in this country; he also expressed his gratitude to those artists who have generously contributed paintings to the art museum of the college. Among these, he mentioned Lillian Ghent, who has contributed a work of art worth $3,500, Rose O'Neil, known the world over, who was the originator of the kewpies, and Violet Oakley. At this time, Prof. Ernesti exhibited the Statue of the Star, donated by James Stirling Calder, a famous Pennsylvania sculptor, showing the grace, beauty, and refinement of this artistic piece of work. This production is the original of the Statue of the Star which was on exhibit in the Court of the Universe during the Panama exposition at San Francisco in 1915.

MILITARY CAMP TO CLOSE AUGUST 16

The national military training camp which is being conducted by the college will come to a close a week from Friday. The military work has settled into a daily routine and everything is progressing rapidly. Dummies, consisting of sacks filled with straw have been put up behind the mining building and are being used for practical bayonet drill. Trenches will likely be dug this week and instruction in trench warfare then given, including the use of gas masks, the throwing of hand grenades, repelling invaders and "going over the top."

MISS LILLY MACINTYRE WINS PRIZE PAINTING

Miss Lilly MacIntyre was the fortunate student of the summer session to win the prize painting, "Hagar and Ishmael," which was presented just before the beginning of the pageant last Friday evening. The winning number was 91. A unique plan was used in drawing the number, nine being drawn first, and the tenth being the one to win. About ninety dollars were realized from the sale of the photographs of this picture. Numbers went with each purchase and in this way was the owner of the large painting determined. The sale of the pageant posters which were also auctioned off just before the pageant began brought about $10.00. All this money has been turned over to the State College Chapter of the American Red Cross.
