training in the camps. Wrestling and boxing will be taught en masse and team athletic play will be secondary. This instruction will be in charge of "Dick" Harlow, athletic director and coach, who is now in the Plattsburg Training Camp familiarizing himself with this mass play. After spending two months in the actual work he will make an observation tour of other camps.

During June and July there were 1200 Boys' Working Reserve Cadets in the standing camp at the college and six troops of Boy Scouts with 192 total members. This camp will be greatly enlarged next summer with equipment furnished by the Adjutant General of Pennsylvania.

The Faculty Council of Administration has sent out inquiries to every war service organization asking suggestions for new courses of study to be taught next year. It is already decided that the work in radio service, signalling, elementary navigation, and training for hospital service will be enlarged next year. The new Vocational Training classes in agriculture, home making and industrial work will be influenced to a large degree by war conditions.

The number of resident county agricultural agents of the state has been increased to 55, leaving only 12 counties unprovided. Their work is supplemented by 34 women demonstrators and traveling teachers in food preservation.

Extra classes in the history of the war, food conservation, military science and nursing are being conducted in the Summer Session for Teachers which has an enrollment of nearly 700. A ten day course in canning, preserving and drying foods was attended by 54 women from 36 counties of the state.

To provide for the teaching and experimental work next year, the following additions were made to the faculty:

Ramond G. Bressler, Professor of Rural Sociology; Edith Pitt Chace, Director of Home Economics; G. W. Davis, Director of Training of Vocational Teachers; John W. Warner, Extension Representative; F. Theodore Strunck, Associate Professor of Agricultural Education; George Wehrwein, Associate Professor of Rural Economics; C. A. Bonine, Assistant Professor of Geology; Hugh B. Lee, Assistant Professor of Metallurgy; Carl G. Watson, Assistant Professor of Physics; Walter S. Beach, Instructor in Plant Pathological Research; Clarence O. Broome, Instructor in Drawing; R. D. Casselberry, Instructor in Zoology; William Brown Connell, Instructor in Animal Husbandry Extension; Stuart W. Frost, Instructor in Entomological Research; Rebekah M. Gibbons, Instructor in Chemistry; Earl R. Wightman, Assistant Professor of Physics; E. H. Hespelt, Instructor in Spanish; Katharine Kumlir, Instructor in Domestic Art; Mortimer D. Leonard, Instructor in Entomological Research; Clara P. Pond, Instructor in Zoology; Ordean Rockey, Instructor in English; Oliver H. Saybold, Instructor in Spanish; Ross E. DEMONSTRATION SCHOOL PRESENTS CANTATA

One of the prettiest events of the summer session was the operetta, "Mother Goose's Flower Garden," given Monday evening in the Open Air Theater by the pupils of the Kindergarten and of the School for Observation.

The theater truly became a quaint and beautiful garden when filled with groups of children dressed to represent the various flowers. The little children of the Kindergarten as Arbutus Rain drops and Bees were especially pleasing, while the pupils of the first, second, third, fourth and fifth grades as Grasses, Dandelions, Roses, Tulips, Violets, Daisies, Lilies, Buttercups, Jonny-jump-ups, Daffodils, Butterflies, Bees, and Blue-birds added to the attractiveness of the scene.

Sara Bartlett, Ruth Martz, Sara Light, Mary Houser, Hilda Mayes, Mary Weigle, and Sara Mallory, from the seventh and the eighth grades, dressed in the colors of the spectrum, formed the rainbow and gave a pleasing touch of color.

The gardeners, Edith Ross, Kenneth Mayes, Adrian Murtorff, George Haller, Nelson Zimmerman and Nevin Robb, with shovels and hoes, made a hit with the audience in a paraphrase of "Over There." It is impossible to discriminate between the other characters since all were good. Adeline Holmes made a pleasing Mother Goose, Aldyth Crane as Red Riding Hood, Verna Wood as Mary Quite Contrary, Eugenia Gravatt as Golden Hair, Mahlon and Mary Robb as Jack and Jill, Margaret Marshman as Bo-Peep, Sue Kern as Miss Muffet, Charles Williams as Tommy Tucker, Homer Rosenberger as Boy Blue and Logan Martin as Jack Horner with his plum pie, all received their share of applause.

The songs were well rendered; the Mother Goose Rhymes, with the catchy music, delighted the audience. Credit for the success of this very novel and pleasing entertainment is due to Miss Staley who directed the operetta. Miss Staley was ably assisted by Miss Wheeler, principal of the School of Observation, and her staff of teachers; the Misses Illman of the Kindergarten, and Mr. Steltz, who acted as stage manager.

LIEUTENANT PERIGORD

UNABLE TO BE HERE

Word was received on Monday that Lieutenant Paul Perigord, of the 44th French Infantry, would be unable to come to State College to speak and to act as instructor in the new military training camp, having been ordered overseas for immediate service. A substitute was provided, however, by the War Department, and Lieutenant Legler, also of the French Army, came here to take the place of Lieutenant Perigord.

Miss Lucretia V. Simmons, dean of women, has arrived at the college and taken up her duties for the coming year.
