STATE WRESTLERS AGAIN WIN CHAMPIONSHIP MEET

In the 115-pound class, Garber, of Penn State, was thrown by Ackerly, of Cornell with a bar and chancery hold in five minutes, fifty seconds. The Cornell man was considerably taller than Garber, but even at that, the Penn State man took his opponent to the mat in the first few seconds.

In the 125-pound class, won a decision from Rhoades, of Penn, in nine minutes. Both men were almost thrown at times, and Babcock was in a bad scissors hold once, but he broke this and remained on top long enough to win an easy decision.

For the third successive time this season, Mowrer, the star Blue and White 145-pounder, defeated Lower, of Lehigh. In the two dual meets with the Brown and White during the season, Mowrer gained a decision at South Bethlehem and a little over two weeks ago threw him on the Army mats. The Penn State man again proved his superiority last Saturday. The men did not go down for some time, but when they did, Mowrer was on top and in a short time he secured a double arm hold which resulted in the Lehigh man's being thrown.

Captain Brown, the intercollegiate champion of last year, threw Ashby, of Penn, in the 163-pound class, with a bar and arm hold in thirteen minutes and four seconds. Neither man had any advantage in the first nine minutes. In the first extra three-minute period, Brown went under, but he broke the Penn man's hold in a few seconds. In his next extra three-minute bout, Brown had little difficulty in pinning his opponent's shoulders down.

In the 175-pound class, Black, of Penn State lost on decision to Manley, of Lehigh, in nine minutes. First one man was on top and then the other, and the margin by which the Lehigh man won was very close.

Noonan, of Cornell, was thrown by Locke, Penn State, in the heavy-eight class in thirteen minutes. The first nine minutes resulted in a draw and in the first extra period Locke was under. The Cornell man gained a scissors hold but this, Locke broke and came out on top, throwing his opponent in twelve minutes. In the second extra period, Locke again was successful in gaining a fall.

Three Men in Semi-Finals As a result of the preliminaries, Penn State was able to enter three men in the semi-finals. Babcock, in the 125-pound class, drew a bye, but as stated above, he had broken several ribs in his bout and he was forced to forfeit to Bever, of Lehigh, in the final round. Locke also drew a bye and was matched to meet Booth, of Lehigh, in the final.

In the 135-pound class, Ketterer, of Penn, won from Mills, of Penn State, on decision in nine minutes. The Penn man certainly was deserving of a lot of credit, for he had wrestled fifteen minutes and won on decision from Bertman, of Lehigh.

Mowrer, in the 145-pound bout, gained his second fall of the evening, when he threw Armstrong, of Penn, with a bar and chancery hold, in five minutes, fifty-seven seconds. The Penn man never had a chance, as Mowrer took him to the mat and soon planted his shoulders down.

In the 155-pound class, Captain Brown defeated Bergholl, of Lehigh, in fifteen minutes. Neither man left his feet in the first nine minutes. In the extra bout, Brown was under first and got out almost immediately. In the second extra bout, the Penn State captain had almost a minute's advantage before Bergholl got to his feet.

The Finals In the 115-pound class, Ackerly, of Cornell, threw Gerson, of Penn, in seven minutes, fifty-eight seconds. The men went down in the first few minutes and Gerson had the advantage. Ackerly, however, soon got to his feet and took his opponent to the mat, eventually winning his fall.

Conroy, of Cornell, threw Ketterer, of Penn, with a head and body hold in the 125-pound class the time being nine minutes and fifty-eight seconds. This bout was a repetition of the 115-pound bout, for the Penn man took his opponent down, who in turn got out from under and was successful in winning a fall.

In the 145-pound and 155-pound bouts, as described above, resulted in decisions, respectively for Mowrer and Captain Brown, over Barrish and Kirkland, both of Columbia. In the 175-pound class, Manley, of Lehigh, won on decision from Pendleton, Penn, in fifteen minutes.

In the heavy-eight class, Booth, of Lehigh, won on decision from Locke, Penn State, in fifteen minutes. The one man would have the advantage and then the other.

In the contest for second place, Garber, Penn State, threw Gerson, of Penn, in the 115-pound class with a double arm lock hold, in fourteen minutes, forty-three seconds. The first period was a draw and in the extra period Garber was on top first. Gerson soon broke loose, but in the second extra five minutes, Garber got out from under and pinned the Penn man's shoulders down.

Black, of Penn State, won second place in the 175-pound class, when he won on decision from Pendleton, of Penn, in fifteen minutes. The men were on the mat several times, but Black always had the upper position and he won by an easy margin.

Rogers, of Columbia, broke his ankle in his bout with Booth of Lehigh, in the preliminaries, and as a result he defaulted to Locke, who thereby secured second place in the heavyweight division.

Mills, of Penn State, took third place in the 145-pound class, when he gained two falls. Bertholl, of Lehigh, was thrown with an arm and body hold in two minutes, twenty-six seconds, and the position of third place for Mills was made sure when he also threw Barrish, of Columbia, with a double arm lock hold in one minute, fifty-two seconds.
