THE END OF ANOTHER YEAR

With this issue, another year has come to a close for the COLLEGIAN Board and the staff gives up the management of the paper to a younger group of men. The present year has been an eventful one in many respects, inasmuch as it has been the first normal college term for some time, and if the COLLEGIAN has played but a small part in events at Penn State this year, the retiring staff shall feel amply repaid for its efforts.

To our subscribers and readers, and to those who have aided in the publication of the paper in any way, we take this opportunity to extend our thanks, for without their support and encouragement it would have been much more difficult to continue publication. To our advertisers, we also wish to extend our thanks, for they have made the paper possible, and we hope that our readers have patronized them and that they have found the paper an excellent advertising medium. To the younger members of the staff, who have done a great part of the work on the publication this year, we extend our best wishes and feel that they will be able to handle the paper successfully hereafter.

The retiring staff does not feel that conditions on the COLLEGIAN have been all that they might have been this year. Handicapped the first few weeks of the term with an extremely small staff, the Board nevertheless enlarged the paper to six pages, and with the exception of some half dozen numbers, have been enabled to keep it at that size every week. With the crippled staff, however, and the fact that the local printing company has been short of help this year, it has seemed virtually impossible to appear on time, and so the last few issues have been cut down to last year's size and the paper mailed out on time. We have also made many mistakes and for these we are sorry; we hope, however, that they will be forgotten, for they certainly were not made intentionally. Our aim at all times has been to publish a carefully and honestly prepared newspaper, to give an unprejudiced chronicle of events and to reflect the sentiment of the students of the college.

For the new staff, we hope that your support will be given as heartily, as it has been given in the past. If there are any personal grievances may they pass away with the passing of the old staff, in order that the new one may start with a clean slate. The future of Penn State looks bright indeed, and it is our fervent wish that the COLLEGIAN together with the college may grow bigger and better as the years go by.

ANOTHER OPPORTUNITY FOR COURTESY

At the close of the Easter recess, another opportunity will be presented for the observance of gentlemanly courtesy. A great number of Penn State students have this year for the first time successfully inaugurated the policy of "ladies first" at the trains upon returning to college from vacations, and it is hoped that, when the opportunity next presents itself, there will not be even one example of where a fellow did anything other than what he should have done. There will be plenty of chances for displaying courtesy—at Bellefonte, at Lewisstown, at Lemont, at Tyrone—and if you do your part and then see to it that the other fellow does his, the true spirit of Penn State will again have been carried out.

The COLLEGIAN wishes to congratulate every member of the varsity basketball team, its captain, its coach, and every member on the scrub team, for the successful season which the Blue and White has just passed through. It has probably been one of the greatest years in the game at Penn State and too much credit and commendation cannot be given to those who thus placed this college in the sporting limelight.

Tonight in the Auditorium there will be given one of the best concerts of the year by the Harpvoical Ensemble. It is one of the concluding musical events at this college by outside talent for the present year, and it is urged that every one, who possibly can, turn out, for the evening cannot be better spent.

Philadelphia men were able to defeat the Nittanyites.

Following this strenuous trio of contests, George Washington University was the weakest kind of opposition going down 60 to 6. The next week Pitt was met at home and conquered in a fast game, 37 to 33. In these contests, the work of the varsity fell below par again and it was only on the western trip which followed that they played the sterling type of basketball of which they were capable. West Virginia and Pitt were successively downed on their home floors, the former game being accredited the finest ever seen at the Mountaineer's home and the latter being won by Mullan in an exciting foul shooting contest with Lovelace, the Pitt star. Penn State's representative dropping in 22 out of 24 chances, making thereby a phenomenal record. After this trip, the alumni were met on the Armyory floor and such former stars as Blackwood, Wilson, Walton, Adams and Baird were forced to bow before the better teamwork of "Dutch" Forman's past season's varsity. The schedule closed with the contest with Lehigh, the Brown and White going down in defeat before the superior work of the varsity in a very rough contest.

Captain Wolfe, in his work the past season, showed himself an especially reliable man, and showed his ability as a shot and floorman in each contest played. The fact that he had the responsibility with him as captain of the team was a great factor in his playing and told him to the extent that he lost eighteen pounds during the season. Wolfe normally weighs about 170 lbs and stands five feet, eleven inches tall, and is a very handy and clever player. His exhibition of fight and gameness in the Penn game after receiving an injury to his eye that was very painful, was especially commendable as was his willingness to sacrifice himself in every play where team play was necessary.

Mullan, the Blue and White's star forward was the fastest man on the team. He was especially clever at handling the ball and could receive a pass and shoot it faster and more accurately than any man ever produced by this institution. Mullan weighs but 145 lbs, and is five feet, eight inches tall. He is of the flashy type, but is also very steady, which forms an unusual combination for the floor man. He is also a clever dribbler and scored many of his points by dribbling past the men who charged him. He is also a consistent foul shooter which was particularly noticeable in the big games when competition was keen. At Pittsburgh his exhibition of foul shooting was the best ever seen anywhere, who, when in collegiate circles or professional basketball, and his work all season has been just of that type.

Replogle, the tallest man on the team, stands six foot, four inches tall, and weighing 175 pounds, is the find of the season. At the beginning of the season, the coach was not the least bit sure of him, but with coaching he has developed into a strong nucleus man. Replogle is a very conscientious worker and one who responds quickly to constructive criticism. He played his best basketball on foreign floors at Swarthmore, Penn., West Virginia and Pitt, and particularly the latter, he gave the best exhibition of defensive center play that Coach Forman has ever seen. At the end of the season he was conceded by outside critics to be the best center in the game, and one who invariably got the jump over his opponent.

Killingier, who has completed his second year on the varsity and whose ability needs no explanation to Penn State students, is one of the headiest players the coach has ever handled and is one who never lets up a single minute from the beginning to the end of a contest. He manifests the same natural headwork, or "athletic sense" in basketball as he shows in football and baseball. During the past season he was a good shot, under the basket and in long shots. He is a powerful dribbler and a very accurate passer. As running guard all season, he has been the real man for the place, as his 77 field goals attest. He is five foot nine inches tall and weighs 150 lbs and was one of the best college guards seen all season.

Haines, who is a newcomer on the team, weighs 165 pounds and is five feet, nine inches tall. He played in basketball much the same dash which stamped him as a "comer" as a half-back in football. He is of the rugged type, has tremendous speed and is a good shot, although on account of Killingier's experience, was kept back the greater part of the time. Against Penn he gave the best exhibition of defensive guarding ever seen. Tjomo and Kille took the ball from Penn and sent it the opposite way down the floor. According to total points scored, Haines' record is not a brilliant one, but what was worth more than that was the fact that he fitted perfectly in the coach's combination. The experience gained this season will stand him in good stead for next year and it is then that he is expected to show his greatest ability.

Of the second string men, Wilson, last year's yearling star has shown a great amount of natural ability. However, due to the presence of more experienced men on the squad, there was no room for him in the combination. He is a fast man and a good shot and is very clever in handling the ball. Besides having ability in foul shooting, he is a good jumper and this season was a general utility man and never failed to respond markedly when called on. Safe to say, if he shows the same keenness next year, there will be a place on the five for him.

Along with Wilson, are two other sophomores, Ritts and Riner, who have shown sufficient ability this season to make someone hustle next year for a berth on the team. Ritts is a steady and good passer and will be a valuable man if his shooting and dribbling is improved. Ritts also has possibilities if he can settle down. He is, however, a very good shot and dribbler.

Coach and Men Cooperate

The past season was a splendid example of what a team can do when the coach and men work together. A spirit of cooperation existed among the men and one thing only was in the mind of all. That was to win for Penn State. No rewards were paid to persons interested. All was for the team's good. Coach Forman thinks that this year's squad is the finest bunch of men he has ever worked with and that the students may well be proud of their record. Mullan is the only man to be lost this season, the speedy forward graduating in June. His place will be a hard one to fill and keen competition for that berth may be expected when the 1921 cage season opens. The individual records of the varsity passers this season is as follows:

Player	Field Goals	Foul Goals
Wolfe	65	121

INFORMATION CARDS TO BE POSTED FOR DAIRY COWS Little Gem Kokufu, Miss Dyar, Jenny Pollock, and other record cows of the Pennsylvania State College herd will no longer have to be formally introduced to visitors. Cards bearing the names and records of these notable animals will be placed above the stalls which they occupy. Each cow in the herd will have one of these plates giving her name, breeding and records of production. It is hoped that this will enable visitors to gather concrete and definite information concerning the cows in the college herd, should they visit the dairy barn when no guide is available.

PLANS UNDER WAY FOR JUNE FARMER'S WEEK The June Farmer's Week will be held at the Pennsylvania State College from June twenty-second to twenty-fourth inclusive. The meetings will be opened on Tuesday evening, June twenty-second. The program, which is being arranged, will include open-air demonstrations upon topics such as fruit growing, vegetable gardening, soil fertility, farm crops, farm machinery, dairy husbandry, live stock, poultry, forestry and home economics. Two of these demonstrations upon each of the foregoing topics will be given each morning and afternoon, and will be followed by demonstrations by group leaders.

The evening meetings will be devoted to problems of general interest discussed by prominent speakers. One evening program will probably be in the nature of an entertainment.
