A GREAT SESSION

Penn State is just about to close its eleventh annual Summer Session for teachers, and the 1920 session will unquestionably go down as the most successful since the idea was originated in 1910. Not only were all previous attendance records eclipsed, but the work done during the present summer has been broader and more thorough than ever before. Never have there been so many different conferences and courses of instruction. The COLLEGIAN believes that congratulations are due to those in charge of the summer work for the very efficient way in which the six weeks' work has been accomplished.

The COLLEGIAN also notes with approval the figures that have been issued on the attendance. Out of a total of 1340 enrolled in the regular summer courses, all but 38 hail from Pennsylvania—a fact which demonstrates quite clearly that Penn State is a real representative institution of the Keystone state. Not that we do not want to have students from outside the state, for we have been glad to welcome them to the campus and halls of our college.

And now, students of the Summer Session, you will soon be returning to the various sections of the state. Remember those "five wires" we spoke about last week? Well, what are YOU going to do about it? You have all been here for this summer—some have been here in previous years—does Penn State mean anything to you? If it does, and we certainly hope that it does, won't you try just a little to return the help that you should have obtained from your work here? The college has done its bit for you and now you are to have the opportunity to do your bit for Penn State. Talk to the needs of the college before your senators and representatives; create a sentiment for Penn State that will force the legislature to give the college what it needs. Be a booster wherever you go, but always remember the old saying "If you can't boast, don't knock."

WE DRAW THE CURTAIN

With this issue, publication of the SUMMER COLLEGIAN ceases for another year and the publishers make their final bow and draw the curtain. We have tried to give you a real live newspaper this summer. How well we have succeeded, you alone must judge. For the many mistakes that we must have made, we are truly sorry. If you have not obtained the full value of your quarter, we are more sorry still—for you!

We want to express our appreciation of the support given us by the subscribers, and also, in a still larger measure, to our advertisers whose generosity has made the publication of the COLLEGIAN possible. We hope that you have given them some of your patronage during the past six weeks. We also want to thank those contributors who have cooperated in making the paper more personal in its appeal, and who have saved the editor many trials and tribulations that he otherwise would have had in plugging up that last little corner on page four!

Some of you will probably return to Penn State next summer. If you do, we hope that you will keep up the idea that was developed this year, namely, that of having news items from the various houses turned in regularly. And don't fail to have your quarter ready when you register for next summer's session. The SUMMER COLLEGIAN will no doubt be on the job again next summer, when we are sure that the publishers will appreciate your support. Who they will be, we cannot say, but we can sing very feelingly that song of Bert Williams, "Somebody else—not me!"

Return Library Books promptly.

CONTRIBUTOR'S COLUMN

The following verses came into the editor's hands in a rather round-about fashion, and we are not quite sure that they were for publication. However, we are taking a chance on running them for they are really worth it. They are written with apologies to Amy Lowell

FRAILTY

Last night, the moon and stars
Of night just passed,
Were hidden cooly behind
A bank of mauve clouds.
The wind sighed gently
Through the trees,
Peace and quiet seemed
Carried close to the very heart
Of that South Wind.
Just then, an adventurous rain drop
Splashed to earth, and
We poor human beings,
Forgetting the poetry of the night,
Rushed to prosaic shelter.

A NIGHT JUST PAST

A great golden moon
Hangs suspended
Just over Old Main
Here and there
A sleepy bird twitters
To her mate in confidence
Above the quiet town
Summer Session students wander
Quietly, alone, themselves,
Knowing not that nature
Protects her white nights
From the loquacious,
By instilling awe of the unknown
Into their very souls.

"STORY OF COAL" TO BE SHOWN TONIGHT

Tonight in the Old Chapel at 8 00, "The Story of Coal," four reels of moving pictures, will be shown. These pictures will show the method of prospecting for coal by diamond drills, the development of coal mines, and finally all operations connected with it, and methods of transporting the coal until it is on export steamers. In the intermission between the films there will be a demonstration of the apparatus employed in the methods used in mine rescue work following mine fires and mine explosions. The demonstration will include methods of artificial respiration of men overcome by suffocating or poisonous gases.

The class in Practical Coal Mining is completing its work, with reviews of some of the subjects, and on Saturday morning certificates will be given out. Shortly after the completion of this course, the work in Mining Extension, which is conducted by the Department of Mining, at the various coal-mining centres, will be resumed. This work for its object, the training of men for coal mine officials, such as fire bosses, mine foremen and mine inspectors. One of the strong features of this work is that education is necessary to prevent or at least to minimize accidents in and around the mines.

Dr. D. S. Moore, Professor of Geology and Mineralogy, and Dean of the School of Mines, is in charge of field work in cooperation with the State Geological Survey. He is preparing an extensive report on the geologist deposits of the state and this is to be followed by a monograph of the geology of Pennsylvania. It is the first time that any such comprehensive work on these very extensive and valuable deposits has been undertaken, and it is high time that the public should have full information regarding the State's resources in these materials, as this is the greatest state in the Union for refractories. These are used in the metallurgical plants.

NEWS NOTES FROM THE ATHERTON CLUB

All those who have been living at the Atherton Club, 216 S. Atherton street, have thoroughly enjoyed the six weeks of summer session. Among the good times were wagner roasts, leap year parties, socials, hikes and excursions.

The wagner toast took place on July 15. The party of sixteen started from the club and hiked to Shingleton Gap and the reservoir, a large fire was built and the "hot dogs" were soon sizzling. To crown the affair, watermelons were sliced up in the latest approved fashion and everybody went to it.

On July 27th, a leap year party was given by the girls. The boys made the most of their opportunity and made the girls wait on them at every opportunity.

Last Saturday, the whole bunch went on a hike to Musser's Gap and while there, were initiated into the Order of Wet Fish when the rain poured down in torrents. Everyone was soaked to the skin and it was a long walk home, but latest reports are that no one was the worse for the wetting.

Campus Colyum

We hardly know what to say this week, for we really are too full for utterance.

We hate to think about all these nice teachers leaving us this week!

The only joy we get is that we won't have to pound a typewriter for almost a month.

DID IT EVER HAPPEN TO YOU
Did you ever go to the movies.

When it was a real good picture.

And you had just settled down to enjoy it.

When someone behind you started in to rent the tides?

DON'T YOU JUST LOVE IT!

WE HEAR they had a nice dance out at the A. D. S. house last week!

They struck our cub reporter off the eligible list, so we can't give any further details!

Nice moon last week, wasn't it?

SOME GIRLS' idea of heaven—a place where there is no eleven P. M.

OUR IDEA of the same place—a place where seven A. M. never comes and where alarm clocks have not yet been invented!

We don't know very much about their scholastic work, but if credits were given for socializing, quite a number would rank high!

OUR WEEKLY DEFINITION
Study—Obsolete

Well, friends, we just can't get any inspiration so we guess we will quit.

We've got too many other things to think about anyhow.

So if we haven't slammed you enough, or if we have slammed you too much in this jure colyum, just accept our apologies and let us part like friends.

Curtains!

ENTERTAINED CLASSES

Miss Eleanor Gibbons of the English department entertained her classes in public speaking and English at her home on Park avenue last Thursday and Friday. A delightful time was had by all.
