CONGRATULATIONS

The COLLEGIAN wishes to congratulate every member of the varsity football and cross country teams for the splendid part they played in bringing about Blue and White supremacy last Saturday. His was a glorious portion, combined with the work of the others in bringing more glory to his Alma Mater. Penn State teams continue to uphold their records and with proper support will keep on doing so. Whether we become members of any "conference" or not, the Blue and White will continue to exhibit to the critical world away from these Nittany hills that in Center County there is a big State College rather than the "little" institution many have supposed it to be. It is another method of demonstrating to the people of the state what Penn State is doing. The COLLEGIAN feels that the men on the teams and the scrubs who made it possible for these men to be of the high calibre they are, deserve the highest commendation a student body can possibly give.

APPRECIATION

When the varsity football squad arrived in Philadelphia last week end, they were met at the station by Mr. Oscar Coolican, Manager of the Locomobile Company at Philadelphia and transported in eight Locomobile cars to the Cricket Club where they were housed over the week end. During their entire stay several of these cars were at their disposal and were a great feature in the accommodation of all. In providing this pleasant feature to the vacant hours of the football men, Mr. Coolican tendered them a great courtesy, one which all will remember him by. The COLLEGIAN expresses the opinion of the students of the college when it tenders its appreciation and thanks to Mr. Coolican for his hospitality and courtesy.

PERFECT THAT UNION

Tomorrow evening, the first meeting of the year for non-fraternity men of the college will be held. It is of utmost importance to these men as well as to Penn State that every unit man be on hand to assist in the organization of his unit and the governing body for all units. The work that the students can do by their various organizations cannot be estimated, sufficient to say that with hearty cooperation, great results can be attained, both for the students and the college. The Penn State Union cannot become a vital factor in the college life unless the non-fraternity men become organized and their plans so arranged that good work may be done. The unit plan is not only a good one from this standpoint. Its possibilities for social improvement are equally as great. Every man should make it a point to be present at this meeting and learn of the work to be done. The great slogan of this hour at Penn State is "Get Organized." When that has been completed then we can expect to do things for the college. The fraternity men get organized through their councils. Let the non-fraternity men get busy and make their council a factor to them. Then, with cooperation by the governing bodies, we will be ready for action. In the election of officers for the units, make sure that you get the best men in the offices. It is not only a matter of choosing the most popular man, but more so in electing the man who can carry on the work best. Get together, unit men, and make your meeting tomorrow evening a success. Its for you and you only and the benefit you derive therefrom is proportional to the interest you put in.

HOW ABOUT IT?

Although a constitutional amendment decreed that there should be no more intoxicating beverages sold after a certain date, it is evidently not being lived up to in many parts of the country. A fact which concerns us most specifically is that such "waters" make their way to State College in sufficient quantity to make their presence prominent. A good example of this was noted following the Alumni Day celebration. The condition of a number of students and former Penn Staters at that time was far from commendable. In former years we have also been troubled with the same sort of conduct on Pennsylvania Day. The COLLEGIAN has made appeals from time to time that the students realize what their actions may mean to the college and that such activities be ceased.

This year, of all years, when the college finds itself in the most critical condition in its history, it is of utmost importance that Penn State men comport themselves with strict propriety. The people of the state are becoming more and more acquainted with this, their state college, each day and it is certainly to be desired that they shall learn only good of the institution and its students. Inasmuch as the student life in the greatest measure, reflects on the college, it is therefore a matter for the students alone. They are the ones who shall judge whether their conduct is favorable or not. If it is unfavorable, then college action can remove the disturbing factors. However, we do not wish any such action, but rather a hearty cooperation from the students to remove the evils.

Penn State men who really are interested in their college's welfare will not do these things. They will do all in their power to counteract the influence brought about by any such occasions. There is only one way to look at this matter and that is through the medium of the college itself. Would it not be nice for word to circulate through the State that at State College, on its annual Pennsylvania Day celebration, students were under the influence of strong drink and were ungentlemanly in their actions? Any person who stops to think of the matter will realize that the impression thus created would be very unfavorable. Thus, since this matter refers only to a small number of students, let us all cooperate and see to it that the number is lessened to such an extent that it will be nil.

Classes Apply Bible To Vital Problems

Over forty Penn State students are attending either the Monday or the Tuesday evening session of the Normal Training Class for Bible Discussion Leaders. This is a group which meets together in order to learn of the proper methods of leading discussion groups and to study the everyday problems from the viewpoint of Christ, so that they may start and lead Bible discussion groups in the various fraternities and boarding houses. At the present time, about twenty Bible discussion classes are being conducted by members of this organization. The Normal Training Class is conducted on the plan of the latest educational method, known as the project method of teaching. A problem of vital interest is taken by the group and analyzed. This problem is applied to the life of Jesus in order to see what He did under the same conditions. The class then decides whether his method of meeting the problem could be practically applied today. In connection with this work, the class has for a text, Harrison S. Elliott's book, "How Jesus Met Life Questions." The same method that the present day advertisers employ is being used, inasmuch as the need of something is first stressed and then a solution is offered. It is then up to the concern to see that their solution works and to prove it.

ENROLLMENT OF WOMEN LIMITED BY FACILITIES

For the information of the Rotarians who visited Penn State during the first part of the week, a number of statistics were compiled, dealing with the enrollment of women at this institution, showing the number of girls enrolled in the various departments, and graphically portraying the needs of greater facilities for the education and housing of coeds at Penn State. According to the figures, the total number of women enrolled here this year is 283, of whom 140 are taking courses in Home Economics, 101 are pursuing studies in the School of Liberal Arts, and twenty-three are specializing in the School of Natural Science while seventeen are registered in the School of Agriculture and two in the School of Engineering.

The total number of coeds living in dormitories on the campus is 240, of whom 131 reside in McAllister Hall, fifty-five in the Women's Building, and fifty-four in the various small houses. An indication of the acute situation regarding coeducation at Penn State is well shown in the fact that although 12,000 girls graduated from high schools in Pennsylvania last June, only ninety-one were admitted to this institution this fall. 150 prospective women students were turned away for lack of housing and teaching accommodations.

OLD MAIN STUDENTS HOLD SUCCESSFUL DANCE

The second annual dance of the Old Main students held last Saturday night in the Armory was a big success. This fact was evidenced by the large number in attendance. Approximately one hundred and twenty-five couples were on hand to make the dance a gala affair and they lived up to expectations. The Armory was appropriately decorated for the occasion, an abundance of pumpkins and corn husks having been secured in keeping with the Halloween season. The music for the affair was furnished by Well's Orchestra, and was a large factor in the success of the dance. The dance commenced shortly after eight o'clock and continued until midnight. Quite a number of the dancers were costumed, several of them being
