Although regular varsity practice will not begin until after the Christmas recess, however, the team has been taking place and much new material is expected to come to light.

Manager Sweeney has arranged for the hardest schedule the Blue and White grapplers have ever faced, which includes meets with Lehigh, Harvard, Cornell, Penn, Navy, as well as an intercollegiate struggle with Iowa State.

PLAYERS TO STAGE FREE CHRISTMAS PERFORMANCE

In keeping with the spirit of Christmas, the Penn State Players will present, in the Auditorium on Monday evening, December the thirteenth, the Nativity Play from the Chester Cycle. This will be produced in the Medieval manner and will be marked by simple, but effective and artistic simplicity in staging and costuming. Doctor W. S. Dye is directing and coaching the play. The cast is made up entirely of Penn State Players, all of whom have applied in at least one former production of the organization. An added feature of the program will be the singing of Christmas Carols by a number of women students of the college. There will be no charge for the performance and everyone is invited to attend. The play is a short one and the entire program should last no longer than one hour.

The field is all set for the "Penn State World Series" with the ample business of the plate and in a moment he will announce that the pitcher's box will be filled by J. Stitt Wilson, the well known labor leader and orator. Six games will comprise this most interesting series and the only way that scores can be obtained will be to go to the 10:55 and continuing every night thereafter at 6:30 until Sunday evening. It will also speak at Chapel on Sunday at 10:30. There will only be one series, both lower and upper class meetings at one time, in order that Mr. Wilson may have more time to rest for the first meeting on Sunday evening.

Mr. Wilson is one of the best known labor students in the world today, having studied all phases of the subject both in America and England. A Canadian by birth, he entered Knox Theological University and later studied at the Garrett Bible Institute in 1911, he was ordained as a Methodist pastor and worked for four years at the Yale St. Luke Church in New York City. Thereafter he served as pastor of the First Methodist Church in London, England. At the end of that time he felt the call of the industrial and social unrest and left the ministry to take up socialistic and labor reform work.

His years of contact with human life in the slums of Chicago both as a student at Northwestern and as a pastor made him realize that there was some incomprehension in society today, and realizing from the ministry he took his Master's degree at Northwestern and went to England for a number of years. While there he lectured on miners and other bodies of laborers in England and Wales, doing all forms of uplift and reform work. He returned to this country and did the same kind of work both in the United States and Canada. Through other trips were made to England with the same kind of work in view and he spent a very busy period of his life gaining the confidence of the working classes. His work has been so successful that he has been invited to speak at the English Parliament.

Major of Berkeley Upon his return to this country he was still interested in the same field of work and addressed meetings in all sections of the country. In 1910 he was elected Mayor of Berkeley, California, on the Socialist ticket and served in the capacity very ably for three years at which time he declined a nomination. During the period that he was Mayor of Berkeley he was also candidate for Governor of California on the Socialist ticket but failed to make the election. It was during this period that he gained a remarkable reputation on the Pacific coast as a forceful and convincing speaker.

After his war, he was chosen by the League for the Ratification of the Peace Treaty in California to follow Hiram Johnson, that noted orator who was "stumping" California in opposition to the League of Nations. At almost every meeting, Stitt Wilson made such a powerful impression on the people that they were immediately and positively for the League of Nations. At one place the vote taken at the end of a meeting showed that there was just one person who was not convinced by the arguments of Wilson.

For the last two years Stitt Wilson has been touring the colleges and universities of the country delivering a series of six addresses on "Constructive Christian Democracy." He has visited institutions in every section of the nation and in every instance has made a wonderful appeal to the students. His addresses and on the following subjects: "The Master Objective of the New Age," "The Master Virtue of the New Age," "The Supreme Hour" or "The Real Tragedy of the Modern Toler," "Immediate Preparation for Industrial Democracy" and for "National Safety."

His Message The message that J. Stitt Wilson will bring to Penn State is one which he thinks is needed by every college man in the country. There is a changing (Continued on last page)
