Players Pick Cast For Cohan Comedy

The Penn State Players are now devoting their entire attention to their coming production of George Cohan's "Seven Keys to Baldpate" which it is their desire to present during the first part of the second semester. The cast for the play has been selected, rehearsals have been commenced, and work has been started in the preparation of the stage settings. The list of characters who will appear in this popular, up-to-date drama is headed by B. W. Knapp '21 who will portray the leading role, that of Mageo. Mr. Knapp is especially fitted to assume this part by virtue of his comparatively wide dramatic experience and his frequent appearances before Penn State audiences. Miss R. Sharpless '23 will act as Mary Norton, Miss L. M. Mather '22 will take the part of Mrs. Quimby, while J. L. Gatz '21 will play opposite her in the role of Elijah Quimby. H. D. Taylor '21 who appeared as Caesar in the recent production of "Androcles and the Lion," will again be seen as Mayor Carrigan. The part of Peter, the Hermit will be taken by W. D. Shultz, '21. The rest of the cast is made up as follows: Lon Max—J. L. Sporen '23. Blind—W. E. Romig '23. The Owner—William Jamieson '23. Mr. Hayden—J. T. McClintock '23. Myra Thornhill—Miss M. D. Mumford. Mrs. Rhodes—Miss K. J. Ruth '23. Jiggs Kennedy—Saul Levy '21.

ABOUT J. STITT WILSON
The following report comes from James Gibson, Home of the Department of Philosophy of the University of Toronto as to the success of a Wilson series:

"I attended nearly all of the addresses and conferences by Mr. J. Stitt Wilson, in the University of Toronto. I was convinced of the downright earnestness of Mr. Wilson. He believes thoroughly in the message he gives and I was also convinced that his message gripped the students partly because of the sincerity of the speaker but also I think from the inherent truthfulness of the message itself."

"I am firmly persuaded in my own mind that Mr. Wilson is on the right track. I was struck with his skill in avoiding sectarian pitfalls, or troubling some non-essentials and concentrating on the main issues."

MANY ALREADY ENROLLED

FOR AG. WINTER COURSE
From advance indications, the short winter course that will be offered by the School of Agriculture in various lines of farm work will be unusually popular this year. Over one hundred and fifty persons have already been enrolled in the different courses and many more are expected to express their intention of spending a few weeks of study at Penn State during their winter vacation. The courses that will be offered embrace subjects in Dairy Production,

Dairy Manufacture, Poultry Husbandry, Pomology, Vegetable Gardening, and General Farming.

COEDS PLAYED INTERCLASS HOCKEY GAMES SATURDAY

Two interclass field hockey games were played by the girl students last Saturday afternoon. In the first game between the seniors and Sophomores, the second year team won by the score of 1-1 despite the excellent fight put up by the seniors. The Junior girls defeated the seniors in the second game by the score of 2-0. The playing was handicapped by the muddy and slippery condition of the field, especially around the goals. In the playing, the work of freshmen fullbacks and junior forwards was particularly noticeable.

A Brother to Atlas

The Ancients hailed Atlas, the giant who upheld their world, as the greatest embodiment of power. But Atlas was a myth. Science has produced a fit companion for Atlas, not a myth but a gigantic machine of iron, steel, and copper, with such tremendous power that it is fitting to call it "A Brother To Atlas."

Atlas performed his duty by upholding the world, and Westinghouse engineers are performing theirs in keeping the wheels of industry revolving. They are continually striving to create electrical apparatus that will conserve the energy of man and make our world a more desirable place in which to live.
