HONOR SYSTEM UPHELD BY CHAPEL SPEAKER

Reverend William L. Sawtelle, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Scranton, made an appeal to students of Penn State last Sunday morning at both chapel services when he begged them to stand by the Honor System.

Since the question of the Honor System is being discussed about the campus to a considerable extent at this time, Dr. Sawtelle's words upon the subject were of great interest to the student body.

"When shall Christ reappear? Many people have been expecting Him for centuries. To this end the Christian churches of our land have been trying to show us why to live so that we will be able to meet Him.

"It was not to be like the Christ, we must first know something about His personality. We have no accurate account concerning His physical characteristics. We do not know how tall He was or how He looked, but it is quite likely that His hair and eyes were dark because of racial characteristics.

"If we are to follow after Christ we must try to be like Him in our conduct. We must be able to keep the ten commandments. When we do not live up to the honor system we are not keeping the ten commandments and consequently the entire purpose of our Christian teaching is lost.

Despite inclement weather, a large and appreciative audience listened to the concert given by the college Military Band last Sunday in the Auditorium. The first number offered was by Wagner.
