It was originally planned to have an interclass schedule but the lateness of the date has made it impossible. There will not be time enough between now and June to prepare good representative teams so the plan was called off. As the Soph-Frosh Scrap was played in the fall the only game on the program will be the game with Toronto.

With the New Greens to Open At the end of the Second Semes At the end of the Second Semester official notification of any failure in examination will be sent out as soon as the grade is received, and such notices will be malled to the student's State College address until Friday, June 10, inclusive; after that date these notices will be sent to the student's home address. Soon Players Should Develop in the Putting Game

The new putting greens will soon be onened to replace the temporary ones now in use, according to "Bob" Rutherford, Penn State's golf instructor. The grass has grown rapidly with the aid of the recent heavy rains and it is considered that toward the end of the month the greens will be entirely ready. When they have been completed, students will be able to do more accurate putting than they are now doing on the temporary, rough ones.

It has been stated that the puting is almost half of the game of golf. In fact, it really is half of the game, since a man is allowed two strokes, which is generally half of them on the green for each hole. This leaves the rest of the strokes of the round to be distributed to all of the other clubs and should impress the golfer of the extreme investment of kelver. If any student intends to be at State College for a week or two after June 10, and wishes notice sent to his State College address after that date, he should leave a written request to that effect at the Registrar's Office.

tributed to all of the other clubs and should impress the golfer of the extreme importance of taking the putting game seriously.

One writer states that the right way in teaching or learning golf is to start practicing putting on the green instead of commencing with the driver. The pupil should take the game from the casy stages and advance to the more difficult after he has mastered these. Most people do not learn golf in this way. Nevertheless, it illustrates the importance of mastering the fundamentals in place of trying the more difficults in place of trying the more difficults in place of trying the more diffiimportance of mastering the fundamentals in place of trying the more difficult and expecting the easier parts of the game to come without effort.

Putting is one of the easiest things in golf and many people who are poor players can be developed into fine putters. There has been a misconception that this department of the game is a gift and inspiration and cannot be acquired. As a result many poor putters have believed this and have resigned themselves to their fate.

The Club and the Grip

The varsity herose team will begin final training on Monday for the coming game with the University of Toronto on June second. The team which has just recently returned from the southern trip is rounding into excellent form and should be in fine condition when the Canadians invade Penn State in two weeks. In choosing a putter, it is always best to have someone who knows the game to make the selection. It is important that this club should be broad enough on the face so that it is impossible to deliver a blow beneath the center of the State in two weeks.

The University of Toronto, which recently won the Canadian Lacrosse Championship has probably one of the best teams in America. They have a good reputation throughout the sporting world and the coming game with the Nittany team should prove to be an interesting one. Toronto is coming south on a trip the first of June which will include Hohart, Syracuse, Colgate and Penn State.

It was originally planned to have an greated play up and down on the ball.

A plain metal putter is best for all general purposes and should serve for the students' needs. The weight on these should be up towards the center of the club so thant, along with the broad face, there is no chance of hitt-ling underneath the center of the ball. For playing the putting game as well as golf generally, the overlapping grip or the Vardon grip is probably the best. After gripping the club with the left hand, the right hand grasps the club slightly lower, with the little finger of the right hand overlapping the first finger of the left. The left thumb is quite completely covered and hidden by the right hand.

This grip tends to bring the wrists together and so produces greater harmony of action in the swing. This form of holding the club is much superior to that of the old two-handed grip without overlapping and at present there is probably no better grip.

Some Advise on Pritting

Some Advise on Putting

Some Advise on Patting
In addressing the ball, the line from the hole and the sole of the putter should form a right angle. The players eye should be vertically above the ball to gage the direction and stroke properly. In swinging back, the players should be careful to keep the head of the putter in the line to the hole, and in addition, be at a right angle to the line. In finishing the stroke the club should follow through the line, preserving the right angle, to guide the ball in the right direction.

The body and head should be kept as still as possible until the stroke is played. It is not, however, a pure wrist stroke, although these are employed on the backward swing. In the follow through, the arms must go out after the club so that the head of the club will follow the line of the hole and not interfere with the direction. The action in the true put somewhat resembles the swing of the pendulum of a clock.

In all long puts, it is a good idea to hit across the hole instead of just for the hole. If the player takes the hole as the goal, he is almost sure to stop short of it. Therefore, in the approach put it pays to be bold in giving the ball a chance to cross the hole instead of fadling many before it reaches it.
