

TECH STUDENTS' OPEN SAVINGS STAMP DRIVE

Novel Movement May Bring Entire Student Body Here For Tech-Penn State Game

The athletic authorities at the Carnegie Institute of Technology have recently devised a unique scheme, quite similar to the War Savings Stamps plan adopted by the government during the war, which may make possible the attendance of one hundred per cent. of the Tech student body at the football game here with Carnegie Tech on Pennsylvania Day, November the fifth.

According to the plan formed, the students will buy stamps at a price of twenty-five cents each and then paste them in a folder which will hold stamps to the value of fourteen dollars, the cost of a round trip from Pittsburgh to State College. The athletic authorities wish to have a record attendance of Carnegie Tech men at the game and it is thought that it will be possible to train the students into the habit of systematic saving.

Carnegie Tech will be represented at the game by hundreds of Alumni, in addition to the student body, inasmuch as the Pennsylvania Day engagement is a red letter event here. The Tech rooters feel that their gridiron team will be one of the best in years and hope to give Beadok's warriors a real scare. Athletic authorities at both Tech and Penn State are co-operating in an effort to make the game a big success for each institution.

MANY EXECUTIVES AT SUMMER I. E. SESSION

The summer course in Industrial Organization and Administration for factory executives, which was offered by the Industrial Engineering Department, proved to be one of the most successful and largely attended courses of the summer session. The men who attended the session came principally from Pennsylvania but many other states were represented.

That the men were interested in their work here and that they felt assured that the work they did would help them improve the efficiency of their factories and organizations was proven by the earnestness displayed by them, and their energetic attendance at classes and in the shops and laboratories in which the principals and theories developed in the lectures were worked out in actual problems. The work of the class was carried on in the mornings, afternoons, and evenings. Two of the men who were present were former Penn State men, one graduating in the class of eighteen ninety-three.

TRIALS FOR ORCHESTRA, BAND, AND GLEE CLUB

The band, orchestra and glee club have announced the times and places for all those who wish to try out for any of these musical organizations.

Bandmaster W. O. Thompson has announced that all new students who wish to compete for positions in the band should report to the band room in the basement of Old Main on Monday at six-thirty p. m. while all those wishing to become affiliated with the orchestra should go to the same place on Tuesday evening at six-thirty.

For the glee club, all Freshmen who wish to try out for this organization are requested to report to the Auditorium on Monday at six-thirty and all others who wish to try out should report to the Auditorium on Tuesday at six-thirty. Immediate work is necessary on the program for the prospective Panama trip.

The work which is carried on by the Industrial Engineering Department is attracting not only the attention of the industries in this country but also that of those in other lands inasmuch as Professor E. J. Kienzle, Head of the Industrial Engineering Department, often receives inquiries from foreign countries. Very recently a request for data with regard to the work of the department was received from Dr. Henry Chulov, of London, England, who was advisor to the Federation of British Industries. Some months ago a letter was received from the Central Provinces of India, requesting industrial engineering information.

PRESIDENT DECLARES POLICIES AT MEETING

(Continued from first page) a profession. You may make a man who will pass for a man of culture by four years of superficial contact with polite letters, but you cannot make an engineer or a chemist or scientific agriculturist, and at the same time a man of real culture, by anything less than four years of hard work.

The Library Situation "One of the weaknesses of Penn State is the inadequacy of our present library. A college of such a large and varied educational program attended by over three thousand students should have a much larger collection of books, and much larger funds for accession and administration. One of our first new buildings ought to be a large stock room addition to the library and a thorough reconstruction of the reference room."

The Chapel Services One of the policies to be strictly followed by the new administration will be the absolute observance of all regulations regarding attendance at the weekly and Sunday chapel services. These regulations as set forth in the college catalogue are supported most vigorously by Alumni, friends of the colleges, parents of the students, Faculty, and the Board of Trustees. Last year's accommodations in chapel were made it necessary to modify these requirements to a certain degree so that recent Seniors have been excused and other students required to attend twice a week. Excuses from chapel will not be granted in the future as a payment for services rendered for such a practice tends to make a right attitude toward chapel in the college as a whole impossible, and the excusing of Seniors is an application of the same principle. By the arrangement of Two Sunday services, by granting a choice to each student as to the mornings he wishes to attend the chapel services, and by placing the best speakers of the country to address the Sunday chapel, the President hopes to gain the endorsement and the whole-hearted support of the student body in this action.

As set forth in his speech, chapel services are indispensable in American college life. "I do not believe in required chapel as a perfunctory exercise or as a hasty formal service, to which no thought is given, and which leaves no better for attendance. I do believe with all my heart in a real exercise of the worship of Almighty God, one which is attended by the entire student body, or by as many as can be accommodated at one time. Such a service can be made one of the most helpful elements of a college course, both for the effect on character, for the promotion of true college spirit, and for the maintenance of the right attitude toward the college."

"To me there is no privilege so great as standing before the great body of the college with hearts subdued by majestic hymn and the searching words of the holy writ, and representing the needs and longings of these battling lives of ours. In chapel as in nowhere else, I feel the unity of the college, an organism as distinct from the thousands of individual lives which constitute it—and I prize beyond measure the opportunity to mould that organism after the pattern taught by God."

"In Sunday chapel, I feel there should be no class distinctions, that the two services should be held of equal importance. All pains will be taken to secure the most helpful and interesting speakers, and I can promise you a list for the coming year of men of the highest caliber of the nation. I feel strongly that our Sunday service should be for instruction and inspiration, and not for propaganda of any cause, however worthy. I will not allow a speaker to recruit for the ministry at a chapel service. These hours belong to you, for your instruction in the deepest things of life, and they should not be taken away from you for the promotion of any cause. The only exception will be the presentation of the Penn State melody to China, which is an old custom of the college.

"I want to ask you all loyal adherence to these arrangements which have been designed solely to promote the good of the college and if you will do your part, we shall have in these exercises one of the most helpful elements of Penn State life. Restraint Needed "I admit greatly the courage of the ambition of Penn State which I take to be three-fold—to be a real college and turn out educated men, to send out men who can hold their own with the graduates of the best technical institutions in the nation, and to be a college second to none in athletics and other student activities."

The prevailing sentiment in conservative New England favors the old order of things, and it is upon this new order of things, as an impossibility and such will be the case if certain limitations are not recognized. A great danger that threatens is excessance in social activities. The President gives his reasons for this belief in a concise manner. "One reason why we ought to be willing to avoid extremes in these matters and in all student activities is the necessity of preserving the democratic character of the college as a state institution. I hope we shall never boast of Penn State as a cheap college, but if we really believe in Penn State as a part of the educational system of Pennsylvania and that ought to be the first article of our creed we ought to preserve simplicity in all our practices."

Closing Exercises Impressive As a representative of the faculty and the school President Thomas then welcomed Dean Will Grant Chambers, who will be Dean of the Summer Session and of Educational Extension. Dean Chambers came from the University of Pittsburgh and, in his new capacity, will try to arrange a summer program to include a larger number of courses of college and graduate grade. The purpose of this improvement is to provide a means whereby the length of one's course at the college may be shortened and to attract a large number of graduate students and secondary school teachers.

An appeal was then made for the co-operation of every student at Penn State in the work that the college has to do. "So it duly passes that some visitor does not walk our campus, observing in our hearing what kind of a college we have here. The influence of the impressions thus made is be-send all estimate. You have the future of the college, as well as your future, in your keeping. Do not lightly injure what generations of good and noble men have sought to build up for the sake of Penn State, be worthy Penn State men."

The members of the class of 1925 were then welcomed to the college and duly declared to be students of the Pennsylvania State College and members of the class of 1925. Judge H. W. Wilton, in behalf of the Board of Trustees, welcomed the incoming class and urged all to give the new president of the college the hearty co-operation that he seeks and help to make the institution even greater and better than it now is. Dean Chambers, in response to the welcome voiced by President Thomas and Judge Mitchell, declared his desire to be a true Penn State man and asked the students to help him in acquiring the Penn State spirit of which he had heard so much. The mass meeting was closed by singing of the Alma Mater by the entire student body.

The Power in Music released at last Mr. Edison's greatest ambition has been to see every home make use of the power of music. This demanded, first, a phonograph of complete realism, no-less. At a cost of three million dollars he perfected such a phonograph. He then put his new invention to the famous comparison-test, which no mere talking machine has ever sustained. This drawing (from a photograph) shows one of these... The singer is Muzio, prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Company. The listener is Bamboschek, principal conductor at the Metropolitan. Bamboschek said, "The quality of Miss Muzio's voice and the quality of its RE-CREATION by the New Edison are identical." This marvelous invention has, at last, released the power in music. now comes MOOD MUSIC "Mood Music" is a 32 page book,—the newest and greatest step forward in Mr. Edison's plan for music in the home. "Mood Music" shows what music will do for you,—now that the phonograph of complete realism is a fact. It tells which selections will refresh you when you're tired, which will cheer you when you're depressed, which will calm you when you're nervous. Bring or send the coupon—and get your copy of "Mood Music". It's free. This wonderful development in music has grown out of a two years research into the effects of music. This research was under the direction of Dr. W. V. Bingham, Director of the Department of Applied Psychology, Carnegie Institute of Technology. Dr. Bingham was assisted by other noted psychologists, and thousands of music lovers who filled out Mood Change Charts. These psychologists found that certain Edison RE-CREATIONS had remarkable power to banish fatigue, nervousness and the blues. They arranged these selections under the headings such as "To Make You Joyous", To Bring You Peace of Mind", etc.—and called this kind of music Mood Music.
