OUR TEAM

The recent notable achievements of the Nittany football team at Cambridge and New York call for some recognition other than the mere historical chronicle of these struggles.

On the athletic field, Penn State has stood for all that is sportsmanlike and clean and the formal avowal of merit is deserved in all quantity that is given to them.

The scrubs are not to be forgotten when the thanks of the students are to be given. Many of them have been on the sidelines for four long seasons with little hope of entering the fray.

PROGRESSIVE LEGISLATION

Class elections and the manner of safeguarding them have always been a fruitful source of discussion and, probably will be for years to come.

At present, when elections are held at class meetings, the secretary tears up sheets of paper to make ballots.

This system has worked fairly well in the past as almost every Penn State man is honest. In every large group, however, a dishonest man is occasionally found.

There is no need of trying to hide the fact that our elections are antiquated and any changes in the system will in all probability be improvements.

Another feature of the elections demanding attention is the method of choosing the members of the Student Council.

In this way a Council is elected that is sometimes unrepresentative and that might not be the choice of each particular school.

EXPERT BIOLOGIST PAYS VISIT TO PENN STATE

Dr. L. R. Jones, Professor of Plant Pathology at the University of Wisconsin and Chairman of the Division of Biology and Agriculture of the National Research Council visited the College November second and third.

He further showed how the modern state university is distinguished from the academy, the earlier type of educational institution which has replaced the academy in the matter of instruction, and from the modern endowed university, by the enlarged program of research for the public good which distinguishes the state university.

Thursday afternoon in the foyer of the Auditorium Dr. Jones gave an illustrated lecture to the faculty on the subject of Cooperation in Research in which he told of the cooperation of the staffs of the departments of Plant Pathology, Botany, Chemistry and Genetics of the University of Wisconsin with private individuals and seedsmen together with the Department of Agriculture of the United States for the prevention of disastrous plant diseases not only in the state of Wisconsin but in various other states from Iowa to New Jersey.

WORK OF HORT DEPT NOT STOPPED BY RECENT FIRE. Dr. Fletcher, head of the Department of Horticulture, announces that the work of that department has not been seriously hindered by the fire, and that the work of restoring the building is progressing rapidly.

HEAD OF FEDERAL BOARD AT PENN STATE. Mr. Freeman Weiss, who is head of the Federated Horticultural Board, at Washington, was in Penn. State, last week, working in the Botanical laboratories.

THIRTEEN TABOO ON PENN STATE TEAM

There is no number thirteen on the Penn State football team. When the players were assigned numbers for the official line-up, this seemingly unlucky number was not included among those given out.

"13" may not be superstitious but he still does not believe in encouraging the fates especially when there are lots of other good numbers that can be used just as well.

forty three other colleges, including technical as well as literary, was 38.8. Army Alpha, Thurston and Binet-Simon psychology tests were correlated with grades made in high school and at Penn State to determine the relative value of grades in these tests as indexes of the quality of the collegiate work.
