PENN STATE ELEVEN FACES SUPREME TEST IN MIDDIES

Eastern Championship Hinges On Result Of Game--Both Teams Prepared For Terrific Battle

INJURIES MAKE BLUE AND WHITE LINE-UP UNCERTAIN

The greatest game of the year, a battle that will virtually determine the football championship of the east, takes place tomorrow in Philadelphia, between Penn State and Navy and the entire country is agog over the outcome. One by one the big teams have fallen by the wayside until only Navy, Penn State, Yale, Cornell, and Lafayette remain undefeated and are able to lay any claim to the gridiron crown. Yale, Cornell, and Lafayette however, by reason of their high schedules, cannot justly be regarded as possessing the best eleven Yale has stacked up against only one worthy opponent, Army, a team which lost to Notre Dame 23 to 0, while Cornell has met only Dartmouth, and Lafayette has trimmed only one good team, Pitt. On the other hand, Navy walloped Princeton, a team which defeated Harvard last week, and has successfully met several other first-class aggregations, while Penn State has kept its state clean thru one of the hardest schedules in years. Lebanon Valley, Gettysburg, North Carolina State, Lehigh, Georgia Tech, and Carnegie Tech have been swept aside by one-sided scores and Harvard was tied 21 to 21 in a wonderful contest that proved the great strength of the Nittany Lions. The playing of both Penn State and Navy has stood out above all others, in appearance and thru record, and their meeting on Saturday has been rightfully rated as one which will probably indicate the best eleven of the eastern United States. Pitt, hitherto a great contender for honors, is out of the race this year because of defeats by Lafayette and Nebraska but will question Penn State's right to sectional championship on Thanksgiving day, no matter how the game ends tomorrow.

An immense amount of interest has arisen in Philadelphia at the meeting vicinity over tomorrow's contest and one of the largest crowds in the history of that metropolis is expected to worm its way into Franklin Field. The Navy-Penn State game will be the big attraction of the day inasmuch as Penn will be playing Dartmouth in New York City in the first game of many years, the two upper echelons of the U.S. Naval Academy will be permitted to go to a game in which the Navy is meeting an opponent other than Army and a large delegation of men is planning to take advantage of the opportunity offered. In addition, many naval men are living in or near Philadelphia and with their families will be on hand to support the Middies. In all probability though, the Academy representatives will be outnumbered by Nittany supporters. Over a thousand students are migrating from State College for the big fray, while the Alumni of the east are making extensive arrangements and will be present in large numbers. Indications point to a big Penn State cheering section.

Navy Is Prepared

The Navy eleven is roused to a high pitch over the impending battle and considers it the hardest game of the year, with due recognition to the Middies' worst rival Ever since the Princeton game, the players have been pointing for Penn State. They have been keeping something in reserve in contests played and date has tended to will release all that they have and will do their utmost to come thru victoriously. This week has been one of strenuous work. Scrimmage was indulged in from the very start, despite the hard game which the Academy team had with Bucknell last Saturday, and much time was spent preparing an adequate defense for Penn State. Signal practice of long duration occurred too, nothing being left returned in an effort to get the players into prime condition. The main practice was wound up yesterday at Annapolis, the team coming up to Philadelphia today for a light signal workout.

Navy is primarily a line-backing team and depends upon its wonderful driving power to offset any strength that an opponent may have. Its offense is of a different nature than that employed by Penn State but like the Nittany attack is very powerful. The line averages about one hundred and eighty two pounds per man, thus being almost on a par with the avoirdupois of the East's line, and according to reports it is better than any line which Penn State has faced this season. The backfield likewise is strong and will prove a difficult combination for Beedok's men to stop. Although it averages only one hundred and sixty-four pounds a man, it is very flashy and contains a powerful punch, offensive tactics Barshot, the fullback, especially will bear watching. He is a great plunger and gains consistently. Navy has three other good backs in Conroy, the quarterback, and Koehler

NAVY RETURNS ON NEW BEAVER

Returns for the Penn State-Navy game will be held on New Beaver Field tomorrow at two o'clock. They will be handled in the same manner as those from the Georgia Tech game. Everyone is requested to sit in the middle of the new stands.

A. A. S. MAY GRANT CHARTER TO COLLEGE

Members of The Association At Penn State Hope to Secure First Charter by Petition

The members and fellows of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at Penn State have recently petitioned the society for a local charter for the Pennsylvania State College. The plans were formed at a meeting of the local members at the University Club on last Wednesday and committees were formed to make a beginning on the undertaking. J. Wood, Professor of Electrical and Mechanical Engineering is at the head of the tentative organization with Professor J. B. Hill acting as Secretary and Assistant Professor W. W. Braun as treasurer.

To date the society has never issued a charter to any institution for a local chapter, so if Penn State receives the charter for which they have petitioned they will have the honor of being the first college or university in the country to receive one. That the charter will be granted is felt to be almost certain by those that are interested in the project. Dr. Burton Livingston, the permanent secretary of the association made a visit to Penn State recently and pledged his whole-hearted support to the movement and gave every assurance that the charter would be granted in the near future.

The association is composed of all scientists in the country and is composed of scientific and research groups in the United States and Mexico. Some of the branches that come under the wide scope of the organization are Mathematics and Astronomy, Physics, Chemistry, Engineering, Geology and Geography, Zoology, Botany, Anthropology, and Psychology, Social and Economic Science, Physiology and Experimental Medicine, Education, Manufacturing and Commerce.

The association was incorporated by an act of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in March, 1874, to carry on the work of scientific research. The great growth of the organization and the prominence of its members in the scientific movements of the age are some of the reasons for the growth of which the association has done since it was founded.

The membership consists of two divisions, members and fellows. The requirements for the association as stated by the constitution are as follows: Persons willing to cooperate in the work of the association may be elected to membership by the council, members who are professionally engaged in the field.

VITAMINE EXPERT TELLS PRE-MEDS OF HIS WORK

The regular monthly meeting of the Pre-Medical Society last Monday evening was addressed by Professor E. A. Dutcher, of the Experiment Station, who spoke on the subject of vitamin research work. The lecture was delivered on a semi-technical basis and served to give the Pre-Meds a fair idea of what the vitamin problem is at the present time. Professor Dutcher outlined the history of the vitamin work and also told of the advances that are being made daily in that field at the present time. Following the outline of the work, Professor Dutcher gave an illustrated lecture on the subject, showing a large number of typical cases and a number of interesting results of his experimenting.

DARTMOUTH GAME MARKS CLOSE OF FROSH GRID SEASON

Big Green Eleven Coming to Penn State With Long String of Victories

LAST GAME OF SEASON

Kerstetter and Gregory Will Return to Former Positions in Backfield

Tomorrow afternoon at eleven-thirty Dartmouth's 1921 football eleven will furnish the biggest and final attraction on this year's Freshman schedule. The Big Green representatives are coming to Penn State with one of the huskiest Freshman football squads in New England. For several weeks they have been leading towards the game by putting up a string of victories. The Dartmouth students are looking forward in hope that their Freshman team will have opened up the score of last year when the Penn State varsity defeated the Big Green eleven and put them out of the championship race. With Kerstetter and Gregory bound to return to their former positions tomorrow afternoon The Penn State Frosh, on the other hand, will be out to make amends for the defeat which was dealt to them by the Pitt yearlings last week and it may rightly be predicted that tomorrow's inter-sectional game will be a battle to the finish.

Dartmouth Has Strong Attack

Up until the present time the Big Green Freshmen have engaged in five football games in each one their long runs and smashing line plunges enabled them to secure overwhelming victories over each of their foes. Most of the material, on the Dartmouth squad has come from the leading New England preparatory schools which have a reputation for developing football men. Coach Huzzell and his assistants have been working strenuously with the squad all season, shifting the men from position to position until they now have an exceptionally fast working team. Starting early in the season, with only sixty candidates, the team has been reduced to at least three teams from which to select their line-up.

About a month ago the Big Green Frosh tackled the Everet eleven and

FACULTY ENTERTAINED BY MISS MONA MORGAN

Well Known Actress Gives Readings of Shakespeare Plays Before Appreciative Audience

The members of the faculty of the college were accorded a rare treat Wednesday evening when Miss Mona Morgan, the well-known Shakespearean actress, gave an interpretative reading of Hamlet, the most profound and contemplative of all Shakespeare's tragedies. To say that her audience was delighted with her interpretation is very little to say. Her interpretation of the tragic genius is too mild. During the reading, not a single sound was heard to break the spell woven by her eloquent powers, and after the recital was finished nothing but praise was to be heard on all sides.

Miss Morgan was at her best in the "ghost scene" when Hamlet meets the spirit of his murdered father on the castle terrace, and again when she read Hamlet's cogitation on death and in the scene where the mad prince shows her mistake of marrying the murdered king's brother. In each of these scenes, Miss Morgan interpreted the various roles in a manner that would have done credit to Ellen Terry or Julia Marlowe.

Miss Morgan is perfectly adapted to playing the roles of Shakespearean characters. Her interpretation is very distinct and her contralto voice enables her to handle effectively the different roles of the varied characters. Her captivating personality together with her knowledge of how to best handle the situations with feeling and true dramatic touch holds her audience until the curtain falls. Miss Morgan said that the reason Shakespeare is unpopular at the present time is not because the reading is difficult but rather because of the poor diction of the interpreter.

Miss Morgan made a reputation for herself last season when she played opposite Mr. Walter Hampden in a number of Shakespearean comedies and tragedies in New York. At the present time she is touring the intellectual centers of the country for the purpose of receiving literary criticism from Shakespearean authorities. Thursday evening she presented the delightful Shakespearean comedy "Taming the Shrew" in the Schwab Auditorium for the Extension Department of the Penn State Players who brought her to Penn State. Miss Morgan feels, she said, that she would not consider dramatic achievements a success without the stamp of approval of the Penn State Players.

COLLEGE SENDS OUT INFORMATION ON DISARMAMENT

Impetus Added to Limitation Of Armament Movement By New Publicity Plan

EXECUTIVES SELECTED

General Plan of Holding Mass Meetings Is Approved By Western Institutions

From the Penn State point of view and from the standpoint of the other colleges taking an active part in the world wide movement to limit the armament policies of nations, one of the most important developments of the past week is the circulation of the letter giving information concerning the work that was accomplished at the student conference held at the University of Princeton on October twenty-sixth. The committee that was appointed by the Penn State Student Council to represent the college in this movement composed such a letter during the forepart of this week and mailed it to all sections of the country.

In accordance with the general plan of campaign as approved at the recent conference that the colleges and universities in the country organize into sections for consideration of the subject and in order to facilitate the efficient accomplishment of the aims of the movement sections have been formed throughout the union, composed of the institutions in that section and under the direction of a selected member of the section. Reports from the many sections are coming to the college every day showing that the work is progressing as rapidly as is to be expected. Most of these sections have requested a more detailed description of the copy of the work and it is for this reason that the circular letter is enroute to the east, west, south, and north.

Penn State Sends Letter

The delegates from the college were among the more active at the Princeton conference and the movement was given its original impetus at Penn State and Princeton at the same time but under a different plan. For these reasons the college is a leader of the idea and as such is sending out information for the movement.

Besides the passage of important resolutions and the adoption of a definite policy, an executive committee was selected and a tentative schedule arranged. E. D. Overdorf, '22, president of the senior class is secretary of this committee. The letter as sent out by the college contains the details of organization and the work to be completed in the near future.

The delegates of all the leading powers of the world are meeting in Washington, D. C. during the latter part of this month and during the months of December and January for considering the advisability of limiting armaments. It is then proposed to hold simultaneous mass meetings throughout the country and to take a vote of the student sentiment at these meetings. The returns will then be transmitted to Washington where they will be made known to the delegates assembled.

The character of these mass meetings has not been yet for the details of the returns announced at Washington. In this way it is hoped to gain the attention of the student of today when considering questions that will have a direct bearing on the peace and prosperity of the world of tomorrow.

JUNIOR PROM DATE WILL NOT BE CHANGED

The Committee in charge of the Junior Prom wishes to announce that there has been no change made in the date for this affair. In studying the schedule of college activities for the year it was found that February twenty-fourth was the only logical time to hold this dance. It has also been finally decided that no underclassmen will be allowed to attend the affair but it has not yet been decided whether or not Sophomores and Freshmen will be allowed to hold underclassmen dances the night of the Prom.

ARMISTICE DAY WILL BE OBSERVED WITH EXERCISES

President's Proclamation Urges All Citizens To Pause For Short Time At Noon

Students, faculty members and citizens of State College combine this morning for the observance of Armistice Day to pay tribute to those who sacrificed their lives in the recent war. The Nittany Post 245 of the American Legion are in charge of the exercises which are scheduled to take place at 11:20 a. m., either on the Front Campus or in the Auditorium according to weather conditions.

Throughout the entire nation today people are all combining in national holidays to the same purpose of paying homage to the memory of those who lost their lives to defend the integrity and honor of their country, and President Harding's proclamation declaring the day for this purpose has had nation-wide response.

One extract from the proclamation by the president clearly explains the purpose for which the holiday shall be used. "I declare November 11, 1921, a holiday, as a mark of respect to the memory of those who gave their lives in the late World War, as typified by the unknown and unidentified American soldier who is to be buried in Arlington National Cemetery on that day, and do hereby recommend that the people pause in their usual pursuits as a mark of respect on this solemn occasion."

Citizens Pause At Twelve

To emphasize the solemnity of the occasion, all public and church bells are to be tolled at intervals from fifteen minutes before the hour until twelve o'clock. At twelve these will cease ringing and citizens have been requested through the President's proclamation to indulge in a two minute period of silent thanks to God for His divine mercy and His blessings upon the world.

State College Exercises

With an ex-service men in uniform, including the American Legion and the delegation of the Rehabilitation students a large crowd will gather at the meeting place in State College for the observance of the day. The students will be there in a body since the college authorities have announced that there will be no classes after the third hour in the morning, in keeping with the national holiday.

The program, following the invocation by Professor G. F. Mitchell, will be opened by a selection of the band and followed by the singing of "America." Professor W. S. Dye and T. C. Pakeman will then deliver short addresses. Mr. Pakeman has distinguished himself by twelve years of service with the British army, during which time he rose from the ranks to the office of Lieutenant Colonel in the World War, he was wounded four times.

Professor Arthur Deering's speech will be well worth hearing since he was in the service from the outbreak to the conclusion of the war, during which time he served the commission of Major. After the address, the band will play "The Star Spangled Banner" and Professor Mitchell, who saved overseas in the Y M C A work will pronounce the Benediction.

The meeting will be in charge of Professor C. B. Steel, commander of the local post of the American Legion. Professor J. J. Light, who is chairman of the general committee, is in charge of the arrangements for the exercises today.

BASKETBALL CARD FOR 1921 SEASON ANNOUNCED BY A. A.

Games With Navy, Pitt, Penn, Princeton, and W. and J. Main Attractions

PRACTICE NEXT WEEK

Many Candidates Expected To Report--Killinger May Coach Frosh

Facing some of the strongest basketball teams of eastern collegiate circles, and with four veterans from last year's championship line-up missing, candidates for the varsity cage team will start preliminary practice early next week under the guiding hand of Coach "Dutch" Heerman, for a season on the floor that promises to be one of the most difficult in the annals of the Blue and White institution.

The schedule for the 1921-22 season is as follows:

Dec 15--Juniata, at home.
Jan 7--Dickinson, at home
Jan 11--Lebanon Valley, at home.
Jan 21--Navy, at Annapolis
Jan 23--Bucknell, at home
Feb 3--Pitt, at Pittsburgh
Feb 11--W and J at Washington, Pa
Feb 11--D. Paw, at home
Feb 18--Pitt, at home
Feb 22--Penn, at Philadelphia
Feb 23--Princeton, at Princeton.
March 11--W and J, at home

At least two open dates still remain on the basketball card and Manager Sayers is now negotiating with several institutions in order to have these vacancies filled. In addition to the above scheduled contests, the Penn State quintet will meet a strong alumni team for a home game within a week after the last regular schedule has been completed.

Schedule A Different One

The schedule, as now arranged, calls for the Nittany Frosh to meet with leaders of the collegiate cage teams and should the Penn State tossers complete such a season successfully, its title to the championship should be undisputed. Navy, Princeton, Penn, Pitt and W and J will undoubtedly furnish the stiffest contests on the present list of opponents to be met. De Pauw University of Indiana is the only team on the State College schedule and will furnish the varsity with a contest of an inter-sectional nature. A comparison can in this way be made with the Blue and White team and institutions of the Middle West.

The two customary contests with both Pitt and W and J in their home cages and on the Arsenal floor have always caused spirited battles in the past and these should be no exception to this present season. The encounters with Penn and the Navy should arouse a great outside interest, since both of these schools have a reputation for putting fast teams on the floor.

Coach Itas Hard Task

With the completion of the Freshman football schedule this Saturday, Coach "Dutch" Heerman will then devote all of his time and energy into putting out the best possible combination of players which the candidates report for work next week. To build up an almost entirely new winning basketball machine is a task which will not only tax the best ability of the mentor but will also call for the hardest work and best cooperation from all of the candidates.

Probably a hundred or more candidates will answer the first call for practice, and "Dutch" will have a wealth of material from which to select his varsity. With the loss of Captain Killinger, Haines, Wolfe and Roplogue from last year's combination many second string men will have a chance to show their true worth, and new candidates showing promise; form should receive greater consideration than is usually possible.

Captain-elect "Andy" Wilson '22, the only veteran remaining from the championship quintet of last season, together with Koehler '23 and Ritter '22, who were members of the varsity squad should serve a nucleus about which the new Penn State basketball team will be built. However, other scrubs and members of last year's Freshman team will put up a stiff competition for the coveted varsity position. Whitman '22, Ritter '22, Hunter '23, Marshall '23, Miller '23, Shair '23, Corwall '24, Wilson '24, Frank '21 and Pitzer '21 will be among those who report for work in a few days.

Killinger May Coach Frosh

There is a possibility that last year's basketball captain, Glenn Killinger, may coach the Freshman team this season. "Killy" who graduated at mid-season, has had much experience as a basketball player and has absorbed a great amount of "Dutch" Heerman's system during his undergraduate days. Nothing definite, however, has been decided about this matter. Freshman candidates will not be called out until a later date and until that time nothing can be known of the true Freshman prospects for a winning quintet.

TICKETS NOW ON SALE FOR GIRLS' A. A. DANCE

The Girls A. A. dance will start off with a grand flourish in the Armory Saturday evening November nineteenth to the tune of "Thompson's Rag." The tickets for this big old college dance are now on sale, and may be secured at any time at Graham's store. It may be interesting to the Freshmen to know that at this time they may discard their pal, the dink, and enjoy all the privileges offered at this affair. The Girls A. A. is anxious to make this occasion big in every respect, and is looking forward to the loyal support of the entire student body.
