WRESTLERS TRAINING FOR INTERCLASS SCRAP

Wilson, ex-'20, will return to Penn State next semester and he will offer the solution to the problem of developing a candidate for the 175 pound class. He showed great possibilities last year when he defeated Spangler in the first bout of the first trials for the team, but was forced to forfeit to Spangler because of poor physical condition after a years absence from the mats. At the present time, Burdick and Everett are working in this division. Both men lack experience and are working hard to gain a knowledge of the game. Hamilton recently reported for this position.

"Tiny" May Have Competition

"Tiny" McMahon still looms as the logical contender for the heavyweight position and he will undoubtedly hold down this place again. However Coach Dettar always welcomes new material in this unlimited class. Funder a two hundred pound football man who has reported to the grappling mentor should be able to make things lively for "Tiny" after a little experience. Parks, who weighs 190 pounds is also doing good work in the heavyweight class. At the present time McMahon has water on the knee, but he is gradually recovering from the injuries and should be able to report in a few days.

DR. SPARKS WILL LECTURE BEFORE HISTORY STUDENTS
Next Monday evening at six-thirty, Dr. Sparks will give an illustrated lec-previous experience in this sport.

Chapin Elected Captain
Chapin, who was recently elected captain, and who boxed at the 125 pound position last year, may fill the same place this coming season, although he must prove himself superior to a wealth of strong competitors to do so. Struggling with Chapin for this weight are Griffiths, Witt and Lent.

In the 135 pound division, Vasilin who alternates in this and the weight below last season may again represent Penn State in the ring, to fill the position at which Cooper usually boxed last season. Steele is also proving to be a boxing possibility in this weight and together with O'Leary, Heffernan and Zerbe, there should be a large amount of competition in the 145 pound class.

BOXERS FIGHT SIX TIMES THIS YEAR

From all fall, their work up to the present time had been of a preliminary nature until the coach could take charge to teach them the finer points of the art.

To find men to fill the 115, 125 and heavyweight positions on the team are the greatest problems confronting the boxing mentor. Bunched together in the middleweight classes is the nucleus about which the whole combination will be built. In these weights, with last season's varsity men returned and other strong contenders reporting for work, Coach Harlow will not have such a hard task in finding material. Many freshmen who have elected the fistle sport are showing possibilities as future battlers although the greatest majority of them have had no and Remney are working out at these weights and the coach is still on the look-out for more candidates here.

INDOOR TRACK TEAM HAS SEVEN BIG MEETS

Establish the Indoor Intercollegiate. The date and place as not yet been decided, but Coach Martin is planning to send a Penn State team to take part in several of the events. The Intercollegiate have not been held during the last few years and their revival has been creating a great deal of interest throughout the track circles of all the leading colleges and universities.

The Blue and White Team

So far, the makeup of the Penn State team has not been decided. Captain Barron will return in February and will probably take part in some of the special events as will Helfrich. The latter and "Larry" Shields will no doubt win places on all the relay teams, while the other two members will probably be selected from the following, who have been doing the best work: Hill, Edgerton, Carter, Graham and Moore.

BEZDEK'S GRIDDERS TO FACE THREE NEW FOES

Benavente on September 23, Penn State will stack up against William and Mary on September 30, Gettysburg on October 7, Lebanon Valley on October 14, and Middlebury on Alumni Day, October 21, all of these contests being fought on home soil. The last named opponent will undoubtedly prove to be the biggest drawing card inasmuch as it comes here on Alumni Day. Its record for the past season was quite good, and it is always counted upon to produce a strong eleven. President Thomas served as president there before taking up his duties as head executive at Penn State.

Following the Middlebury game, the Nittany eleven will enter into an intensive period which will rival the closing part of the 1921 schedule. First, Syracuse will be opposed in New York City on October 28, at the Polo Grounds, then Navy will be met at Annapolis. Carnegie Tech will now be fought on home grounds on November 11, Pennsylvania Day to be followed by Penn at Franklin Field on November 18 and then the season will come to a close on Thanksgiving Day at Pittsburgh, Pitt being the opponent.

These five games should serve as a supreme test to the Blue and White team. Syracuse, Penn and Carnegie Tech from all indications will have much stronger teams than they possessed this past year while Pitt and Navy will undoubtedly produce their usual fine eleven. Penn especially is making preparations for a good record next fall and confidently expects to make a come-back. Carnegie Tech will have almost the same identical eleven which faced Penn State on New Beaver this year.

Two days before the Christmas recess the annual elections for the football captaincy were held and resulted in H. N. Bentz '23 being chosen grid leader for 1922. Bentz has been varsity center for the past two years and should make a capable leader. C. W. Parsons, '23, was elected football manager at the time, the first assistants being R. E. Longacre, '24, R. S. Ploch, '24, and M. Mitchell, '24.
