THE GREAT COMMONER LECTURES ON ORATORY

W. J. Bryan Explains Essentials of Public Speaking in Short Address

William Jennings Bryan proved conclusively on Wednesday afternoon that he has lost none of the powers of oratory which have been attributed to him when he spoke before a group of students that completely filled Room 100 Horticulture Building.

After a short introduction by Miss Ruth E. Jackson of the English Department, the speaker began with the subject of introductions and showed that the public speaker should make his introduction modest and unassuming. For the speech itself there are two primary requisites, stated Mr. Bryan. These are information and earnestness.

The speaker must know the facts connected with his subject and he must be intensely interested in his material if he is to impress his hearers with his idea for eloquence is thought after.

WRESTLERS FACE SPRINGFIELD FOES IN HOME CONTEST

New Englanders Threaten Crippled Penn State Line-up in Last Home Meet on 1922 Grappling Card

As the Nittany opponent in the last home event on the 1922 wrestling card, the Springfield College grappling team comes to Penn State with the avowed purpose of testing the Blue and White wrestling ability in the meet that is scheduled to begin on the Armory mats tomorrow afternoon at two-thirty.

The only basis for forming a comparison is contained in the showing that both teams made against West Point in the meet held at the military grounds, the Springfield Collegians received credit for a total of nine points through three decisions while the soldiers claimed two falls and two decisions.
