

PLAYERS WORK HARD ON JUNE PRODUCTION

Dramatists Planning to Re-enact Several Plays During Coming Summer Session

The Penn State Players are planning a very busy week on Penn under Walk, which is to be their commencement of the year.

The scenery for this performance has been designed and executed by D. H. Porterfield, '23 and it is one of the most unique sets that The Players have ever presented.

In addition to nightly rehearsals for Pomander Walk the Players are also carrying in rehearsal Nothing But the Truth, The Witches Hat, and Claret.

"RURAL LIFE" CONTAINS INTERESTING ARTICLES

The eighth and last issue of the "Rural Life" has come out and contains some interesting articles.

It is found that there are to be three new intensive courses taught in a two week course, August seventh to ninth.

It was noted that I did not appreciate having something come thru the mail from you to me since I would say nothing to hurt your feelings unless I meant it.

But I can still feel the shake that comes from having you swallow tears before these wet snuff to be swallowed.

MANY PROMINENT MEN ON LIST OF SPEAKERS

One of the most promising movements for the advancement of Agriculture over instituted in this state will be put under way this week.

It is planned to have the farmers study and determine for themselves the needs of the School of Agriculture.

A program of entertainment and business has been worked out for the occasion. The meeting will begin with a dinner and social gathering in the social room of the Presbyterian Church.

Plans for inspecting the various departments of the School of Agriculture will next be explained to the group.

"AGS" APPLY FOR CHARTER OF HONORARY FRATERNITY

Soft and gentle the rain was falling overhead an underfoot. There was nobody lurking round town except a couple scrub perfumers trying out these new gum shoes.

But the time Minnie came almost blin herself into Haven was when Wheeler Leggett hung her pale of our tabs for a birthday present.

Useless is getting interested in watching spring come. Says the weather has a sort of under-meaning to the kitchen.

It is now considering plans for the transportation of the delegates. About eight of them will make the trip by-hiking, and the remainder will probably go by automobile.

HAMLIN GARLAND TELLS OF HIS LITERARY CAREER

Explains in Serial the Manner in Which He Started His Work and Wrote Many of His Articles

In looking back over my life I can see that my whole literary career was determined by a chance meeting with a stranger.

One Sunday afternoon, in 1884, my parents and I were surprised to receive a call at our home in Oriday, South Dakota from a visiting Methodist clergyman named Dushford.

His friendliness and sympathetic understanding led me to confess that I was not entirely content as a Dakota land-owner. I confided to him that I hoped to get back into the work of teaching, and that I thought I had a special bent toward the teaching of literature.

I haven't money enough I had expected to sell my claim for enough to carry me back to Iowa or Wisconsin where I could take a special course in some college, but all that is out of the question.

"I don't risk it" I answered. "I haven't money enough I had expected to sell my claim for enough to carry me back to Iowa or Wisconsin where I could take a special course in some college, but all that is out of the question."

"The outcome of this brief conversation was an amazing adventure for me. In less than two months I sold my claim in MacPherson County, and followed out Dushford's suggestion.

Two days later I might have been seen—I was seen—packing across Boston Common carrying my imitation leather valise, as hoping a specimen of corned beef as well as some of the shingling New England Mecca.

I found lodging in a hall bedroom on the south side of Baylun Place, and there for six months I starved and froze in a sunless, bleak cell.

I had no friends in all New England except Dushford in Portland and he was hardly more than an acquaintance.

Sometime during the spring Dushford wrote me to say that a friend of his, Dr. H. B. Cross of Jamaica Plain, would like to have me call and tell him more about Dakota, and so, one lovely Sabbath in May, I decided to sacrifice a dime and make this call.

I found Dr. Cross living in a square frame house in a garden of pear and apple trees. He was a tall thin man with beautiful dark eyes and a kindly smile.

Definite salary for the summer, drawing account on business, railroad refunded. Position will pay right person $400 to $800 during vacation.

I tried to thank him for it "You are quite welcome," he said "Come out again."

"That day is a sweet blossomy memory to me even to this date, and while other good Sunday dinners followed, none of them had the marvelous qualities of that one in which the odor of the apple blossoms was mingled.

Late (in July as I recall it) the Doctor said to me, "Mrs. Cross and my little daughter are going to the country for the summer and if you'd like to come and stay with me while they are gone, you are welcome. You can pay me when it is convenient."

This offer fairly broke me down. I could hardly find voice to thank him. I saved my voice for I was down to almost my last dollar and in despair of remaining longer in Boston.
