EDITORIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

For the seventh year, the SUMMER COLLEGIAN will be published during the summer session, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania State College. This publication is the official newspaper of the summer school and has the approval and support of the college authorities. It is being published by private interests who are bearing the financial uncertainties of the enterprise.

It is the aim of the editorial department to give to the subscribers of this paper an accurate and well written account of everything that takes place around the college, covering the other departments of Penn State in addition to giving a complete account of the activities of the summer session. We realize that very few people will be interested in reading about those past events which are attended by the public, and it is, therefore, our plan to give brief write-ups only of those lectures, concerts, etc., about which every one knows. It shall be our endeavor, however, to give full accounts of events that are to take place, believing that our readers will be interested in knowing the who, when, what, and where of the various features of the summer session that are to come.

It is the aim of the business department to present the paper to its readers at a popular price, and the subscription rate has, therefore, been cut to just half of what it was last year without diminution in the size of the paper. We feel justified, under these conditions, in asking virtually unanimous support from the students and faculty of the summer session. Our advertisers have been secured with the idea that they have what the summer students want, and we can assure our readers that they will find at the places of business advertised in this paper, in addition to reliable merchandise, the most courteous treatment and careful attention that is possible.

DR. CHAMBERS IS NEW DEAN OF SUMMER SESSION

In 1894 and 1897 The following year he was a graduate scholar at Clark University, and the two years, 1899-1901, he attended the University of Chicago. His Alma Mater, Lafayette College, conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Literature upon him in 1917. Dean Chambers began his career as an educator by teaching in the public schools of Mount Pleasant. He then went as an instructor to the Central State Normal School. Following his graduation from Lafayette College, he became professor of mathematics in the Indiana State Normal School, at Indianapolis, Pa., and in 1901 he went to the head of (Minnesota) State Normal School as professor of psychology and education. Three years were spent in this position, and then he went still farther west and became professor of psychology and child study in the Colorado State Normal School.

He remained there until 1909 when he was called to the University of Pittsburgh to become the professor of education in that institution, and the following year was appointed Dean of the School of Education at the same institution, a position he held until coming to Penn State last fall. Dean Chambers is a Fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He is a member of the National Education Association, and served as president of its Department of Child Study in 1909-1910. Among the other educational organizations of which he is a member are the following: The American Psychological Association, the Society of Colleges of Teachers of Education (President in 1916-1917), the Simplified Spelling Board, the Pennsylvania State Educational Alliance, the Pennsylvania Schoolmasters' Club, and the National Society for the Study of Education. He was chairman of Section V, fourth International Congress on Home Education. He was District Director of the War and Navy Departments, Commission on Training Camp Activities, with headquarters at Honolulu in 1918-1919. He is also a contributor to various educational magazines and reviews.

DR. THOMAS GIVES PLANS FOR "GREATER PENN STATE" TO ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

President of College, in Address to the Annual Meeting of the Penn State General Alumni Association, Presents Details of Movement

CAMPAIGN FOR BUILDINGS AND CHANGE TO UNIVERSITY WILL MAKE UP PROGRAM

A "Greater Penn State" is the slogan that has been adopted by the alumni, students, faculty, and friends of the Pennsylvania State College, and the conviction has recently been expressed that the raising of a two-million-dollar fund for buildings, and great progress made in changing the name of this institution to the Pennsylvania State University. The first few weeks of the movement have been indicative of more than ordinary success for the campaign to be launched during the fall months.

"A year ago today you told me to go ahead with a plan I presented at that time to raise $2,000,000 for buildings," President John M. Thomas said to the 300 alumni at the annual business meeting of the association in the Auditorium on Alumni Day during the recent commencement activities. "He spoke at length on the details of the campaign and the many encouragements the various committees and executives have received in the few weeks preceding commencement and the alumni gathering. Chief among these have been the very encouraging letters received from President Harding, commending the ambition of the college in its university development, and the unsolicited action of the potato growers of Pennsylvania to themselves raise the funds for the proposed new Penn State hospital as a part of the general campaign."

Not having told the general alumni meeting of the previous year concerning the State University development plan, President Thomas said to the subject in some detail at the Alumni Day meeting. In this connection he gave a review of the general objects of the campaign for raising a fund of $2,000,000 by subscription from the alumni, former students, patrons of education and friendly individuals and interests in the state.

"One of the principal objects," President Thomas said, "is the assurance of legislative appropriation adequate to the needs of the institution, by creating in every community of the state a Penn State sentiment of such strength that it will automatically influence State Representatives and Senators. "It will inculcate the spirit of pride in ownership by driving home to the people of Pennsylvania, to graduates and former students, as well as to present students and faculty, the fact that the College is the only institution of higher learning in the State which is entirely free of private control, and is jealously guarding this status."

In this connection President Thomas gave undeniable proof of the College rating absolutely as a State institution by reading extracts from four different opinions recently handed down by the Attorney General of Pennsylvania. These showed among other things that the College is exempted from the payment of a gasoline tax, for as a state institution, the state will not tax itself. They also showed that the College is not subjected to the terms of the inheritance tax, that the state must pay the fire insurance on College buildings and equipment, and that College instructors are eligible to come under the provisions of the state employees' retirement act.

The development and drawing closer together of the units in Penn State Alumni Association will be another favorable outcome of the general campaign, and already many favorable reports have come in about new organizations forming and others being strengthened by united support in all sections of the state.

The campaign will also increase the prestige of the College among the influential and prominent people of the state, President Thomas pointed out. The general view point on the campus today is to the effect that these objectives, if attained, will mean the opening of a new era of Penn State prosperity. They are attainable with the united support of alumni. This is the first time in the history of the College that alumni have been called upon for such activity—a rally to the assistance of their Alma Mater—and everywhere they are on their mettle to make the movement a great success.

Results Showing
The campaign objectives are already showing in actual results. The movement, while still in the stages of kicking off its swaddling clothes, has aroused national notice and endorsement, President Thomas pointed out. A public (Continued on Page Four)

LANDSCAPE PAINTING TO BE TAUGHT BY NOTED PAINTER

A new course in landscape painting by Emile Walters, a noted painter, will be given to students of the summer session. This course in painting will be somewhat elementary and should interest summer session teachers who care to devote some of their time to a study of oils and water colors.

Mr. Walters, the instructor in charge of the course, has gained some distinction as a landscape painter, having canvasses in the Huntington Art Gallery, Long Island, the Art Institute of Chicago, and the Louis Tiffany Gallery in New York City. He also has a picture in the gallery of Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., at Oyster Bay. Two of his pictures were recently purchased by the Canadian government.

ANNUAL FARMERS' WEEK HELD AT PENN STATE

The annual Farmers' Week at Penn State was observed on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week, and during that time at least 3,000 farmers of Pennsylvania were visitors to and guests of the college. In addition, there were about 300 boy and girl farmers here for the judging contests.

MR. PRICE ILL
Mr. Burr Price, who is in charge of publicity for the campaign for "Greater Penn State", is very ill with appendicitis. He was taken to New York City this week, and was operated upon yesterday.
