ATTEND THE MASS MEETING

A booster mass meeting of all the students of the summer session has been called for next Monday evening in the Auditorium, and it is earnestly urged that every summer student be there. Matters of the utmost importance, not only to each student, but to the college as well, will be taken up.

At this time there will be presented by Dr. W. G. Chambers, Dean of the Summer Session and Educational Extension, and Professor George R. Green, the plans for a "Greater Penn State". The movement to make this institution the "Pennsylvania State University" will be fully explained, as well as the prospects of so enlarging the facilities of the college that it will be possible to accommodate 10,000 men and women students.

Now, just what does this proposed enlargement of Penn State mean to the students of the summer session? Does it mean anything at all? It certainly does. For the first time this summer it has been found necessary to limit the enrollment of the summer school. Never before has the turning away of summer students at Penn State occurred. A greater Penn State will prevent a recurrence of such a condition. In an institution adequate to care for 10,000 college students, it is quite obvious that almost an equal number can be accommodated during the summer.

Other colleges and universities are able to take care of their summer enrollment. Why should not Penn State? It is, therefore, of vital importance to you to know all about the proposed development of this college. This will be presented at Monday's mass meeting. Be sure to be there.

And, to clear up a much-mooted point, the summer students play a vital part in college life at Penn State. As President John M. Thomas recently expressed it: "The summer term is an integral part of the academic work of the college. The standards are therefore as high as those which prevail at other terms. Penn State has no distinction between summer work and that of the 'regular' college year. Therefore every student is a Penn State student, loyal to the college and to all her ideals and hopes."

Within the next week there will be presented at Penn State two events of more than usual interest. The one is the recital tonight by Miss Olive Nevin, soprano, and Mr. Harold Milligan, pianist, and the other is the presentation of Augustus Thomas' powerful drama, "The Witching Hour", by the Summer Session Players. It is rare, indeed, that programs of such cultural value are presented in the towns of Pennsylvania, and the students of the summer session should not neglect the opportunities that are now before them in the form of these two entertainments.

DANCE TO BE HELD AT OMEGA EPSILON HOUSE

What promises to be one of the best of the summer dances open to the students of the summer session this summer will be given tomorrow evening at the Omega Epsilon House, on the corner of Miltany Avenue and Locust Lane. Dr.inking will begin at eight and end at midnight.

Music for the occasion will be furnished by "Danle" Welles' orchestra, consisting of seven pieces. Mr. Welles who is a member of the summer session faculty and gives piano organ lessons, has developed an orchestra which furnishes music of high culture. During the last year, his orchestra won the reputation among the student body at Penn State as being one of the best in town, as well as rating high in the list of orchestras in this section of Central Pennsylvania.

This dance tomorrow evening is open to all the members of the summer session, and a good time is assured all who attend. The admission charge has been fixed at $1.50 per couple. Punch will be served as a light refreshment during the evening with no additional charge.

Those in charge of this dance plan to run one at the Omega Epsilon House each remaining Saturday evening of the summer session. For each of these dances, "Danle" Welles' orchestra has also been engaged.

BUTLER COUNTY BOYS PLEDGE $10,000 FOR PENN. STATE HOSPITAL

Joining in the generous movement that is sweeping through every county of the state, 230 boys in Butler County, ranging in ages from 12 to 18 years, have taken it on their shoulders to pledge their county's share to the Potato Growers' Hospital Fund for the erection of a $100,000 building on the campus of Pennsylvania State College. Word was received here this week that the boys had held a meeting and had pledged $10,000 to the fund.

There are 17 boys' potato clubs in Butler County, and the pledge means a contribution of approximately $50 from each boy. The clubs were organized by state college extension specialists two years ago and many of the youngsters have already won prizes as potato growers. Each boy has signed a blank for his share in the fund and is free to earn the money in any way he sees fit.

The fathers of the boys are heartily back of them in their generous action, which matches similar action taken by two boys' funds in nearby Cambria and York counties, last week. The older potato growers in Butler county have signified their willingness to have the quota for that county come as the gift of the county. The candidates' contributions will all be made through the boys' organizations.

In addition to Butler county, Erie and Washington counties have pledged their support to the fund, which is being raised as part of the Penn State campaign for $2,000,000 for health and welfare buildings. Ground for the hospital will be broken on August 23rd when it is expected that the entire group of Butler boys, together with other boys from every section of the state, will come to State College for the ceremony.

Woman Potato Grower Subscribes

The first woman potato grower of the state to contribute toward the Potato Growers' fund for the erection of the hospital building at Penn State is Mrs. Matilda Kahlhelm. Her home is near Patton in Cambria county and her subscription goes to swell the total from that county. The Cambria growers have pledged at least $5,000 to the fund.

With the men, women and boy potato growers of Pennsylvania, all contributing to the fund to build Penn State's hospital, the project is sweeping the state and it is expected that the entire fund of $100,000 will be raised before ground is broken for the building.

DR. BAGNELL TO SPEAK ON SUNDAY EVENING, JULY 23RD

The speaker for the service a week from this Sunday evening, July 23rd, will be Dr. Robert Bagnell, who is pastor of the Grace Methodist Episcopal Church in Harrisburg. Dr. Bagnell's subject has been announced as "The Gospel for an Age of Reconstruction."

SUMMER SESSION WORK PROGRESSES

Unofficial Enrollment is Approximately 2,500; Evening Lectures Held as Planned

Because of the unprecedented number of students enrolling for the 1922 summer session at Penn State, it has not been possible to officially tabulate the number who are taking work here this summer. The summer session office, however, has announced that approximately 2,500 students have been admitted.

It is not difficult to account for this record-breaking enrollment, when one considers both the variety and excellence of the courses offered this summer in addition to the many features of special interest. Early in the year fifty thousand preliminary announcements were sent out in the summer session office, and these brought requests for upwards of 10,000 summer session catalogues.

The evening program of lectures the past nine days has been carried out as planned. On Wednesday evening of last week, Mrs. Anna L. Budick, Specialist in Industrial Education for Women in the Federal Board for Vocational Education at Washington, D. C., spoke on the subject, "From Chance to Certainty." She was followed the next two evenings by Dr. David Snedden, who completed his series of three lectures, the first on "What is Wrong with the Schools" having been given previously. On Thursday evening of last week, Dr. Snedden spoke on "The Making of a People," and on Friday evening on "The Self Culture of Teachers."

An entertaining lecture was given on Saturday evening by Miss Mary Sheepshanks, of Cambridge, England.

who very forcefully presented the subject, "The Women's Movement in South America." Miss Sheepshanks had just returned from an eight month tour of the South American countries and she presented her topic in such a manner that left no doubt but that she was thoroughly familiar with the things about which she spoke.

What was characterized by several students as one of the best lectures of the summer session was the sermon given Sunday evening by Dr. George W. Richards, president of the Reformed Church Theological Seminary at Lancaster. At this union religious service Dr. Richards presented the problems and opportunities of the new age, in comparison with the ages that are past.

The Hon. Frank Pierrepont Graves, Commissioner of Education for the State of New York, and President of the College of the City of New York, gave a series of three lectures on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings of this week, and they were enjoyed by all who attended. His subjects for the three evenings were "Intelligence Tests," "Vocational Guidance," and "Modern Tendencies in Education."

Last evening, a pleasing lecture, and one filled with cultural value, was given by Mr. C. Valentine Kirby, Director of Art for the Department of Public Instruction at Harrisburg, who spoke on the subject, "Our Daily Contacts with Beauty and Art."

INTERESTING LECTURE GIVEN BY MRS. STORY

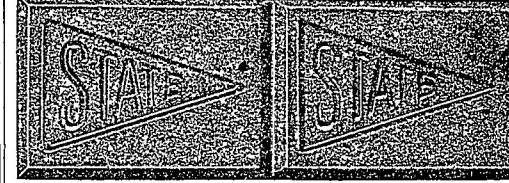

One of the most interesting of the lectures of the present summer session was given on Monday of last week, July 10, when Mrs. Chester B. Story addressed an appreciative audience in the Old Chapel at four o'clock. Mrs. Story, whose home is in Edgewood, is a dress economist, and a field agent of the Joseph Horne Company of Pittsburgh.

The subject of Mrs. Story's lecture here was "As Others See Us," and she was attentively listened to all the time she was speaking. The theme was proper dress, not only from an artistic but from a comfortable point of view. This lecture has been given by Mrs. Story nearly 250 times, and over 100,000 people have heard her speak on this subject.
