

STUDENT CAMPAIGN DRIVE CALLS FOR $100 A MAN

(Continued from first page.) started in his life-work and should find him in a position to make payment without any serious inconvenience. In addition to the plan as given above, the classes which take part in the Student Campaign about to be launched, will not be expected to give a class memorial to the college in their senior year, as has been the custom in the past. It is then, simply a matter of grouping all the class memorials of the next four years into a composite sum to be used as a part of the emergency fund of $2,000,000 which the College is now trying to raise. After the Student Campaign has been across successfully, the publicity men in charge of the main campaign work plan to use the student's drive as a source of publicity information to drive the needs of Penn State home to the people of the state. A one hundred per cent cooperation on the part of the student body will act as an invaluable aid in putting the main campaign across because the citizens of Pennsylvania will then come to realize, in part at least, that Penn State, both as an institution and as a body of representative Pennsylvania men and women, is desperately in need of more state aid. President Thomas and Dean Warnock have assured the Student Council that if they succeed in putting this drive across, no more campaigns to raise money among the students will be permitted at Penn State this year, with the exception of the annual Y. M. C. A. drive. This proposition will be submitted to the Student Council at its next meeting to-night for approval. If this approval is given, the student body will be free to give its whole-hearted support to the coming campaign without fear of being called upon to take part in any other financial campaign during the remainder of the year.

On account of a misunderstanding it was thought that faculty members were given a preference over the townspeople and students in the choice of seats. This is untrue, as everyone is given an equal opportunity to choose his seat from the charts at the Y Hut, the only stipulation being that of "first come, first served". The seating arrangement provides that the seats in the center section of the first floor of the Auditorium and those seats in the center section front of the balcony are priced at five dollars, while those in the first three rows downstairs and the seats in the row from T to X and the best seats at the sides of the balcony are listed at four dollars. The three dollar seats include those in the last three rows downstairs and those on the extreme end of the balcony. Although these three dollar seats are the same as those given over to general admission last year, they are all reserved this season in an effort to eliminate the necessity for coming early to get a seat. All the seats in the Auditorium will be reserved for this year's course.

GRIDIRON WARRIORS PREPARE FOR GAME

(Continued from first page.) This is the weakest point in the backfield and the greatest hindrance to the success of the team as a whole. When the candidates first began practicing, "Mike" Palm showed up as the most promising candidate to fill the berth left vacant by Killinger. He was fast and under Bezek's coaching gave promise of being capable of filling that position. An injury to his forearm has put him out of scrimmage for a week and it is doubtful whether he will be able to enter the game against St. Bonaventure next Saturday. In Palm's place Bezek has been using Kerstetter of last year's Freshman team since Mike's injury. Kerstetter lacks experience along the quarterback line and Bezek has a hard job to bring him up to the required standards in order to be an asset to the team. Kerstetter is not fast enough when he is carrying the ball and often fails to break through a hole that is gaping wide open in the line. Ray Carson, Andy Shaner and Wilson, the remaining members of the backfield continue to show improvement in their work. Carson when running the ball can always be counted on to gain ground with his hard charging. A little slow at first, Carson has been getting rid of that handicap and is a decided advantage to the team. Kratz is still a strong bidder for the backfield.

and is a dependable reserve for Bezek in case of further injuries to the squad. Line is Strong Entirely opposite to the conditions last year are the factors which are facing the gridiron coaches this fall. Last year at the beginning of the season the coaches had two first class backfields from which to choose the first string quartet. On the other hand the line was weak and slow. The line was exceptionally heavy but this seemed to be a disadvantage to start with. Stiff and constant practice along the weak points however served to iron out the wrinkles and produce a team that came through.

This year the Nittany pigskin warriors are facing a different outlook than last year at the preparation for the first game. The backfield is not yet up to standard and the candidates who can be considered are few. However the line this fall is in first rate condition and is the least of the coaches' worries. A weak line had to be strengthened and speeded up last year while the buckers of this year are a veritable stone wall for defense and are constantly improving in speed on the offense.

Game Played Saturday As one of the best means of getting a line on the candidates for the various positions before the game next Saturday, Coach Bezek had a regular full length game played between the first and second squads last Saturday on the regular football field which is in excellent condition. The game Saturday, which differed from the ordinary scrimmages in that it was not stopped by constant interruptions by the coaches, gave the coaching staff the opportunity of observing the men under actual playing conditions where every gain or loss of the ball depended on their own actions and brought home more forcibly the points that the coaches have been bringing out to the men. The first team made repeated touchdowns against the scrubs by constant driving down the field. Although the team had no trouble against the second team, the game showed that smoothness is still lacking. The line on the defense showed up exceptionally well, allowing the scrubs to gain only a few yards by scrimmage, in most cases acting as a stone wall.

CIVIL ENGINEERS TO HEAR DEAN SACKETT

(Continued from first page.) planning a very active year at Penn State. Over half the meetings will be purely social in nature in order that the Civils may become better acquainted. Tonight's assemblage will be very informal, the main object being that of bringing about a closer relationship between the faculty and students. The society is also planning to hold the annual elder feed and smoker Friday evening, the twenty-ninth of September. Other plans include several dances and smokers and also a banquet. Dean Sackett, who is the main speaker on tonight's program, will soon leave for Philadelphia where he will again make his headquarters at 247 S. Juniper Street. Here he will conduct a service and campaign information bureau and will also direct the training classes which are conducted in Philadelphia for industrial employees by the Extension Department of the School of Engineering.

FROSH FOOTBALL SCRIMMAGE BEGINS

(Continued from first page) well at the halfback position. These four men who have been playing together for the past few days on the first team with the necessary training which they will continue to receive every day until the first game with Bellefonte on October seventh, will probably be the center around which the team will be built. Another halfback who has no little ability is Light who was injured and cannot turn out for scrimmage for a few days. The line, although large and heavy, averaging about one hundred seventy to eighty pounds have not yet reached their best working form. They do not hit the opposing line hard enough to push them back but are merely content to buck and then slacken up which results in a tumbled mass through which the ball runners are not able to gain. As with the rest of the team improvement is daily noticed when holes are made in the second team line. At such times the backfield men do not seem able to find the opening and are quickly brought down. For the time spent however by the yearling candidates, they are doing all that can be expected, and under the eye of "Dutch" Hermann will gradually round out into a team for which the prospects appear bright.

JERRY COMES BACK TO HELP Even Jerry, the mule, has fallen in line for the campaign. For all his stubbornness, he has given up his preferred space in the museum in favor of the undergraduate campaign. He has taken himself and his skeleton to another corner of the museum and given away to a table and a chair--the headquarters of the Emergency Building Fund campaign for students. The mule who built Old Main has given up his place to the undergraduates who are to rebuild it. Jerry did his share seventy years ago. Will you do yours now?
