THE WORTH OF A STUDENT

A college education, besides supplying a person with the essentials of a successful post graduate life, is a cloak that covers a multitude of sins.

But there are countless attributes, blameless in nature, which are born and have their being on the college campus.

Since the founding of Penn State, it has been conclusively proved that these qualities are inherent in Penn State students to a marked degree.

A series of three meetings have been held by the campaign officials for the purpose of acquainting the future canvassers with the principles of salesmanship.

THE "Y"

Chief among the welfare organizations on the campus is the local branch of the Y. M. C. A., which is soliciting a six dollar pledge from each student at the present time.

It is a student organization on the campus, controlled by the representatives of the student body, and used for undergraduate welfare.

Also, the Y. M. C. A. is entirely dependent on the generosity of the student body for funds to carry on its work on the campus and abroad.

The college authorities have realized the importance of the "Y" campaign and have designated it as the only other campaign for financial support that is to be allowed at the college this year.

BUY A "NICKLE'S" WORTH

Starting today and continuing until Christmas recess, the women students of the college will be seen about town selling Christmas Seals.

These insignificant-looking little Christmas seals selling at a "penny" each might justly be described as the greatest little life savers that the country has ever known.

woman conceived the idea of selling these stamps to aid in a local fight against tuberculosis, the movement has grown by leaps and bounds.

The sale of these Christmas seals has done more than any other thing to educate the people of America against tuberculosis.

The community about State College will benefit directly from the local sale of seals since all money raised here will stay right here to fight tuberculosis in the Nittany Valley.

Campus Gossip

What Aes Think of 's Every Aes must have his day and this is it.

And it is only fair that we print what they think of us and ourselves so that we shall all understand each other better.

You flatter yourself if you think that your feeble column arouses more feeling than pry for a wandering mind.

To which we cheerfully reply that every man has a right to his own opinion, and who can prove that he is wrong?

"An Agrokultur Student" writes under the heading of How Cum? "In my opinion, all of you fellows are inferior to us who are taking a U. S. degree."

We don't claim to be superior either. We believe that there are Liberal Artists, Engineers, Miners, Chemists, just as dumb and that character is not confined to the Hill.

Says G. M. M. '24, "You ask why some one does not rise up in defense of the dumb ags. Do we need to still a quart of ink to let the world know who we are?"

"It is possible that the seeming indifference of the agriculturally inclined to the blatant ridicule of the campus is due in some measure to their years of experience amid the discordant chorus of the barnyard at feeding time," writes another defending Ag.

"In support of dumb agging as a profession," he continues, "we would state that it is the foundation of all civilization. If we may be excused for a reversion to ancient history, what would the clothing business be today if it were not for the apple?"

We might print other extracts on the subject but we think that this establishes the Ag side of the case.

On the other hand, a student of a rival school tells us that two Two-Year Ags took their lady friends to the "Y" five movies.

And we claim that that was true economy as well as quite a novelty for the young ladies.

Anyway we're glad that "Bez" hasn't entered in this argument.

It doesn't matter to him what course a man takes. He has to show the stuff if he wants to make good with Hugo.

And likewise we don't care what course "Bez" took in college. He has the stuff and he's made good with us, so we want to keep him right here at Penn State.

APPLICATIONS RECEIVED FOR SHORT AG. COURSE

The thirty-third annual Short Course in Agriculture for farmers will be given by the School of Agriculture this winter beginning January fourth and ending March third.

Expenses for those taking this course will run between ninety and one hundred dollars, three dollars additional being charged those who take dairy manufacturing.

POMOLOGY STUDENTS TO ENTER JUDGING CONTEST

Teams From Six Colleges Compete in Annual Meet at Horticulture Building

The Apple Judging League will hold its annual contest tomorrow evening in Room 104, Horticulture Building.

On account of the lack of room, spectators will not be allowed in the room at the time of the judging.

There are twenty varieties, three plates to a class, to be named and placed, while only twenty-five varieties can be used.

The winning team will get a "Leg" on the big silver cup, and when the cup has been won by one college team three times, it becomes the property of that college.

A unique feature of this meeting will be a dinner on Saturday. The members of the class in Systematic Pomology will serve a meal entirely of Penn State products.
