AG PROBLEMS TALKED OVER AT CONFERENCE

Agriculturists Meet at Harrisburg To Discuss Farm Topics of Pennsylvania

Last week a conference was called in Harrisburg by Secretary of Agriculture Willetts, and authorized by Governor Pinchot, to consider the problems of agriculture in Pennsylvania.

The conference was attended by the heads of the Departments of the School of Agriculture, representatives from three hundred thirteen farmers' associations, extension men, managers of cooperative organizations, and practical farmers.

The different interests, including the poultry men, swine breeders, fruit growers, potato growers, vegetable men and tobacco growers, met in the afternoon to talk over their own problems.

The results were not definite. One thing in particular that was brought out by the conference was a desire for increased research work at the Pennsylvania State College.

The establishment of a department of Farm Economics, which had already been advocated by Dean Watts was strongly urged.

The men interested in fruit growing asked that a fund for the hunting licenses be set aside to pay for the damage caused by deer and rabbits, such as the indemnity that is paid for the killing of sheep by the deer license.

It is recommended that all sires in the state be pure bred and registered.

The Spanish School will sponsor a trip to Spain. Members of the party will spend four weeks studying at the University of Seville in the heart of the most interesting region of Spain.

The remainder of the time will be devoted to visiting all of the important cities of that nation.

In its attempt to meet the needs of students and teachers, it has reduced its price about $100 below that asked by any other such study-travel group.

W. K. Jones or O. H. Green, of the Spanish Department of Penn State, both of whom were members of the party last year, can give information to those who are interested, or catalogs will be sent to those who address the school directly at Washington, D. C.

EXPERT SOLVES DUST EXPLOSION PROBLEMS

Ninety-five per cent of the grain dust explosions in mills and grain elevators can be prevented, according to Professor H. W. Detrick, head of the milling engineering department of the college, who is a specialist in dust explosions.

Professor Detrick, who has conducted valuable government investigations here on dust explosions, has suggested a plan for elevator dust elimination which has proved practical.

Fear of weight loss in grain has heretofore prevented much progress in this life and property saving action.

The local specialist maintains that the regular systematic removal of dust accumulations is the best safeguard against explosions.

LA VIE WILL CONTAIN FIRST ALUMNI HISTORY

Penn State Ranks High Among Colleges and Universities, in Percentage of Active Graduates

The first complete history of the Penn State Alumni Association is being written for the La Vie by E. N. Sullivan '14, Secretary-Treasurer of the Alumni Association and Editor of the Alumni News.

This Association is the oldest organization connected with the college on the campus. Penn State has 5674 living graduates and forty-seven per cent of these are active paid members of the association. This is one of the largest percentages of active alumni of the colleges and universities of the country. Since the first meeting held July twenty-eighth, 1870, the association has been active, supporting itself to a great extent on alumni dues which furnish seventy-five per cent of the revenue. The need of a complete history of the alumni has been felt for some time, with the result that Mr. Sullivan has undertaken the task of compiling one which promises to shed more light and interest on the only organization which connects the student directly to the college after graduation.
