FRESHMAN TO CLASH WITH W. VIRGINIA TEAM

halfback positions since he made a fine showing this week in scrimmages, breaking through for long runs.

W Va. Well Balanced

West Virginia boasts as formidable a freshman football team as it does a varsity eleven. The men are all of an ideal weight and the team as a whole is well balanced. In addition they have won all their games this season with only one team being able to score against them, whereas they have secured a total of over two hundred points against less than ten on the part of their opponents.

Their lowest score this year was fourteen and the highest was seventy-six. To date, the Pitt freshmen have been the only ones able to score against them and it must be remembered that the Penn State freshmen were beaten by this same team last week.

The Lion cubs, however, are preparing to give the young Mountaineers a stiff battle. They will line up tomorrow against a team composed of the following men: Patrick, left end; Hargley, left tackle; Jennewine, left guard; Blount, center; St. Licht, right guard; Milligan, right tackle; Kott, right end; Farley, quarterback; Martin, left halfback; Hards, right halfback; and Morrison, fullback. West Virginia is bringing twenty-seven men on her northern trip.

death in 1920. Loran is the furnished the world of opera and of music with many of its favorite dramas and melodies. The scene of the opera is laid in Calabria Italy, on the Feast of The Assumption. The period is between 1867 and 1870. As an interpretation of the life of the simple Italian peasant, "Pagliacci" is beyond doubt unequalled. As in added attraction the words will be sung in Italian. Another unique thing about the opera is the fact that the last four words are spoken not sung.

Singing the part of Nedda is Marie Louise Stage, late of the Cincinnati Opera Company. She is a young soprano whose voice has received the commendation of able critics. The part of Canio is sung by Charles Dickson, tenor, who is also a member of the Cincinnati Opera Company. Talice de Guarato sings the part of Tonio. Bath and brimstone. The part of Peppo Chester Tallman the part of Silvio.

PENN STATE HAS UNUSUAL ATHLETE

and nine o'clock finds the agriculturist arriving home in his flivver where he finds the youngsters are already in bed.

During wrestling season, this human dynamo follows the same routine except that many times, he does not get home until ten o'clock, especially if the flivver, a recent acquisition, is out of commission. But Tom takes it all as a matter of course—it's all in a day's work with him. He is set upon becoming an athletic coach until such time as he can save enough to equip that livestock farm he holds as his future dream to come true, and when Doyle says "Tom will make a good football and wrestling coach, don't overlook that," the great majority agree with Mrs. Ellwood who says the same thing.

TEAM IS GREETED WITH SPIRIT AT MASS MEETING

Philadelphia to play Penn. One is the alumni smoker on the night preceding the game. The other is the dance on the evening following the game.

The alumni smoker will be held on Friday evening in the Clover Room, beginning at seven o'clock. As an added attraction the committee in charge has arranged for special entertainment. A vaudeville performance and a program furnished by an alumni quartet will feature the occasion. Owing to the difficulty in securing transportation the band will not arrive until late in the evening. In time, however, to play several numbers for the benefit of the "grads." There will be a minimum of speech making.

Dance Saturday Night

Roy Stein's orchestra will furnish the music for the annual Penn State dance which will be held in the ball room of the Bellevue-Stratford at eight-thirty Saturday evening. The local alumni association is doing all in its power to make the post-game dance as big an affair as it has ever been given in the Quaker City. All Penn State students and their friends are invited to attend the smoker and dance. Tickets for the dance are three dollars and fifty cents per couple, and may be obtained at the Alumni Office in Old Main.

Ellwood is somewhat older than the average Penn State student. He has played in "hard luck" during his college career which really started nine years ago, in the fall of 1911, when he entered the freshman class from Washington, Pa. High School where he had been captain of his high school eleven.

Tom went out for the Military Freshman team but an injury developed into head poisoning and Tom was forced to give up college. One year later, dealing hell and out for the young farmer when he and Miss Alta McCollins were married seven years later, Tom saw the red need for completing his college course, and also acquired a bank account of sufficient proportions to enable him to take the entire family to State College for the time necessary to win the coveted degree of Bachelor of Science in Agriculture.

State College is overcrowded so Ellwood took his family to a little farm near Leont and this where he is today. Tom's hard luck in wrestling hit him that first winter of his return to Penn State. In practice, one night several ribs were cracked, the injury keeping him out of the mats for the balance of the season. He had little difficulty winning the 175 pound belt last year, but old lady "Hard Luck" again caught up with the stalwart athlete when he was attacked with the "flu" just a few days before the inter-collegiate bouts were to take place at Cornell.

Is Last Year

This will be Ellwood's last season on both the football and wrestling teams, and while he is determined to find a position on the first football team, he is just as determined to chase off the Jinx and win the wrestling championship. Tom has played on the varsity in a number of games this season and last season, and what he lacks in weight against the six footers who compose the Penn State forward line, Ellwood makes up in pep and fight and downright aggressiveness, qualities that frequently cause "Box" to hold him up as a worthy example before the fifty odd muleskin-clad warriors on the Nittany Lion battle ground. "It's a hard life but I like it," said Tom, "and although it doesn't give me much time with the family, they're going along in great style and it really makes a fellow do a little better than his best as 'B.' tells us."

Tom's three boys are destined for follow in their dad's footsteps, for the two older ones are already becoming interested in the greatest of all American college games. Following the Navy game, "Dutch" Bedenk presented "Bill" and "Tom Junior" with a full sized spaldin and they were the happiest youngsters in the community.

"Gonna" play football like Daddy some day," said Bill who was promptly seconded by Junior "Pop" and Tom. Mrs. Ellwood said nothing although a significant nod and wink often curts a world of meaning.
