

CHAPLAIN PRAISES ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Influence of Martyred President on People of Today Shown in Tuesday Night Lecture

LOYALTY IS NEEDED FOR COMPLETE AMERICANISM

Taking Abraham Lincoln as the subject for his talk, Dr. Fraser Metzger had little trouble in holding the attention of his audience when he appeared as the fourth speaker of the Tuesday evening Liberal Arts lecture series on February twelfth in Old Chapel.

In opening his talk, the chaplain stated that the redeeming qualities and the vice alike should be shown when one gives a man's life history. As most people are familiar with Lincoln's life, Reverend Metzger decided to talk as little about Lincoln himself as possible, but instead to show the relation and effect he has had on people of today.

To illustrate the power of Lincoln on present day people, a short story was given. The substance of this story was that a boy, dominated by the spirit of Abraham Lincoln, gave up his bad habits of stealing and lying. It was shown that this led to the presence of the martyr president so strongly that he held him as his best friend.

Stresses Need of Loyalty
The speaker was of the opinion that a spirit of loyalty, which was so marked in Lincoln, he said, was a staunch supporter of patriotism and loyalty and always held that spirit uppermost in his mind when considering what made a real American.

Another one of Lincoln's traits that would prove most desirable to-day is that of nationalism. This spirit, he said, is absolutely necessary before any internationalism can be thought of, remarked the chaplain, and the Civil War president showed this to a pronounced degree when he took such a strong stand for the saving of the union.

Still a third thing which Lincoln brought forth and which might prove of value now is the fact that in all the disputes between labor and capital, it should always be remembered that of the two, labor was the first established, coming years before such a thing as capital was known. In present day troubles between these two factors this fact should be kept in mind when settling disputes.

Reverend Metzger pointed out that there was division in the church at the time of the sixteenth president, just as there is to-day, but that Lincoln was a member of no church. However, he had a religion that was of such a nature that the people of this twentieth century would do well to pattern their lives after it.

Lincoln gave a manhood, also, of such a magnitude and greatness that it was marked and respected by all his countrymen. This was his fifth contribution, said the speaker, and likewise would prove a benefit if more prevalent at the present time. The lecture was closed by the Reverend Metzger giving a quotation from Kipling that was appropriate when talking of Lincoln's life.

As the next morning of the Tuesday evening lectures, Dr. J. W. Pigeon will talk on "Schiller in the Literature of Germany and the World." This will be the fifth of the series and will also be presented in Old Chapel at seven o'clock.

CALVIN RICE SPEAKS TO PENN STATE STUDENTS

National Secretary of A. S. M. E. Gives Illustrated Lecture to Nittany Engineers

Penn State students and faculty members were afforded the opportunity of listening to one of the biggest men in engineering circles when Calvin W. Rice, National Secretary of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, appeared here last week.

Mr. Rice's address was one which appealed to not only one branch of engineering, but to every one of the various engineering sections. Knowing his reputation, many of the engineering students as well as most of the School of Engineering faculty turned out to hear him. At this meeting, Mr. Rice illustrated his remarks with motion pictures and hand-colored slides describing the conditions as they exist in the various countries that he has visited.

Calvin Rice has, for many years, been known as one of the best engineering authorities found in the nation, and his experience justifies his reputation. Only recently he traveled through South America with the National Investigation Committee, headed by Secretary of State Hughes. He has also traveled through other nations which has given him a real insight into engineering conditions of great magnitude.

Beside this address, the noted A. S. M. E. Secretary had several other talks to give at various other meetings. At four o'clock he met with the Executive Board of the Central Pennsylvania section of the national society. Again at seven-thirty he talked, this time to all students in engineering from eight-thirty until nine o'clock, before the members of the A. S. M. E. He closed his active day at Penn State by delivering a radio talk on the subject of "The Engineers' Contribution to the Community."

L. M. MARKLE WILL AID COLLEGE FRUIT RESEARCH

Canton Manufacturer Offers Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollar Laboratory

The Pennsylvania State College and the fruit growers of Pennsylvania will be the chief beneficiaries of a unique agreement recently entered into by the college and the Marble Laboratory Incorporated, of Canton, Bradford County, Pennsylvania.

For several years Mr. L. M. Marble, president of a wealthy manufacturing concern, has been deeply interested in the problems connected with the storage of fruits and vegetables. He has extensive orchards at Canton and has built up his farm the Marble Laboratories for the study of storage problems. The laboratory is equipped with different types of storage rooms, both naturally refrigerated and air cooled, together with scientific apparatus for laboratory determinations. It represents an investment of over one hundred and fifty thousand dollars and is the best equipped laboratory for the purpose in the world. The research conducted by the Marble Laboratory has already won national recognition and has contributed largely to a better understanding of the principles that should govern the construction and operation of storage houses, more especially of farm storage cellars.

As the final Penn State speaker, attempted to prove that the United States could do much more good outside of the League of Nations than it could do as a member of the same group. The latter was the outstanding speaker on the negative side and he had a very effective rebuttal along with his main talk.

PENN STATE LAUNDRY

MILITARY BALL PLANS PUSHED BY COMMITTEE

Orchestra Has Not Been Selected—Bids Will Be Accepted for Checking Concession

In order to rush plans through for Penn State's second annual Military Ball which will be held in the Armory on March fourteenth, five more students were added to the general committee which now includes C. H. Bond, chairman, K. D. Fetter, 24, K. R. Decker, 23, R. M. Thomas, 21, A. B. McQueen, 24, J. H. Gould, 27, W. H. Rowland, 25 and A. C. Lousley, 25. A meeting of the complete committee will be held this week and it is expected that final plans will be made at this get-together.

Although no orchestra has been selected as yet, the committee is still in communication with the Kentucky Colonels and a definite agreement should be reached within a few days in the event that the Colonels are unable to appear here on March fourteenth. Other leading dance orchestras will be tendered contracts last week. "Zee" Conroy's orchestra, one of the highest paid combinations in the country, played for the Military Ball and it is the intention of the committee to make this year's affair surpass the previous one.

FRESHMEN LOSE OPENING DEBATE TO ALLEGHENY

Judges Consider Superior Delivery of Meadville Team in 2 to 1 Decision

In its first appearance, the freshman debating team was defeated last week by the 2-1 decision of the judges when the strong Allegheny College freshman team was met at Meadville on the evening of February eighth. The Penn State speakers upheld the negative side of the argument "Resolved That the United States should enter the League of Nations."

The team was forced to do without the services of its coach, C. O. Robinson, who was too ill to go on the trip. H. P. Graves, instructor in English at Allegheny College, placed and arranged the debaters while in Meadville. The debate found C. L. Willard, G. A. Straight and R. W. Tyson on the Nittany aggregation. These men justified their being placed on the team in the capable manner in which they matched arguments with the Allegheny yearlings. The closeness of the debate is shown by the vote of the judges, which was 2-1.

Allegheny's Delivery Superior
For some time, the judges had to consider their way of voting, but their final choice favored the home team. It seemed that the point on which the winner was determined was that of delivery, that of the Penn State first-year men being slightly inferior to that of their opponents.

Willard, as the first speaker for his side, maintained that the covenant of the League of Nations was so indefinite that there might be considerable doubt as to its real meaning. Straight following him on the negative side of the question, stated that the League might be a source of danger to this country because the covenant is so indefinite.

Tyson, as the final Penn State speaker, attempted to prove that the United States could do much more good outside of the League of Nations than it could do as a member of the same group. The latter was the outstanding speaker on the negative side and he had a very effective rebuttal along with his main talk.

With a regular freshman schedule in the making at the present time Coach DeLu has issued a call for all venturing candidates to report to the Armory every evening at seven o'clock. Several first-year men have been under the impression that since they were eliminated in the interschool trials, they have automatically been dropped from the squad. However, DeLu announces that this is a false impression and all men who have ever been selected for the squad are requested to report.
