FRENCH INSTITUTE

ON THIRD WEEK

classes because they know they are incapable of talking with him in French, or even of understanding him should he address them in his native vernacular.

The Pennsylvania State College offers an extraordinary opportunity to the public acquisition of the French language to all those who are willing to make the effort that is demanded. The Institute of French Education which has now been in session for over two weeks affords conclusive proof that a speaking language of French can be gained, if the student observes strictly the rule of speaking no English while attending the school.

This immersion in the language creates an atmosphere that penetrates to the mentality of the student to such an extent that in a very short time he actually begins to think in French and later on even dreams in the language. There is a wide difference between translating English words and phrases into French words and filling the product French, and the ability to think and speak as French people do. In the Institute of French Education the students in the very French atmosphere, they hear native French men and women speak their tongue as they do in family and natural intercourse, they learn words and expressions that are used in every day life, and become acquainted with the thought manners and customs of France.

This leads to a broadening of their horizon, to the enrichment of their mind, and also to a deeper comprehension of the problems that confront the world at the present time. It takes them out of their provincialism.

Not an Experiment
The Institute of French Education is no pedagogical experiment. The experiment has been made elsewhere and it has been proved beyond cavil that Americans can be taught to speak French even without having been in France.

Life is extremely interesting in the Institute. For six weeks the students are almost blissfully transplanted into another soil. They summer and winter, and sometimes shed their skin during the first week. The second week they begin to realize that they are making progress and the third week convinces them that they can learn to speak the language that had baffled them. Their mistakes are carefully corrected but no one ever humiliates them, but rather with them when they utter monstrosities. It is through the correction of one mistake that we learn not to fall into the same pit twice in succession.

One of the features of the Institute is the singing. It is inspiring to hear the students, all together in the evening, seated around the piano, singing the songs that the French people sing from childhood up. It is not easy to sing in French without an accent and it has been found that singing, properly conducted, is a valuable means for better diction, purer enunciation and elegant pronunciation. All the evening meetings are opened with song.

There is no doubt that the Institute of French Education is a great success. It has come to take its place in Pennsylvania and it offers to students of French an attractive opportunity to acquire what many have thought quite impossible—a fluent speaking knowledge of the French language.

ONE-ACT PLAYS FOR THURSDAY

and act activities that they cannot feel. Then one night when all are about but these two they open the door, out into the night, and solve their problem. Gertrude Krieger's acting is strong, as ever, and the role gives him a great scope of dramatic intensity. It will be recalled for his interesting portrayal of the week of Slozky in The First Shop, and also Steve in Suppressed Desires. Miss Sweeney plays a most extraordinary role and never from the moment of her entrance until her exit does she fail to thrill her audience. Miss Sweeney is a member of the Saratoga Drama League and her work is of very high caliber.

The first play of the evening is Joint Owners in Spain by Alice Brown. This play is a most delightful bit of comedy and it is a play that will entertain every moment of its playing time. It is given by Miss Blith—Grace E. Pitts, Miss Dyer—Florence P. Fields, Mrs. Mitchell—Margaret E. Herion, Mrs. Pullerton—Irène Davenport.

The scene is laid in an old lady's home and the situation is an amusing one. It is told with all of Alice Brown's quaintness and understanding of old women. To relate the story even in part would spoil a most enjoyable entertainment for you. You must go to see it and enjoy it to its utmost. This is a splendid piece of acting. Miss Dyer's role of Mrs. Blith played by Miss Pitts is equally well portrayed by Miss Fields and there is a strong supporting cast.

To Visit State College

The annual tour of the Dustleton Motor Club will take its one hundred fifty members through State College on Saturday July 28. Many of this group are the capable growers who live in the suburbs of Philadelphia.

The Philadelphia counties plan to lunch at the county club while on their visit here and then to spend a couple of hours visiting the campus and going over the College farms.

Around The House

This article was prepared by members of the Extension Service and Home Economics department of the College of Agriculture at the University of Arkansas.

Because of the varied needs, there is a demand for contrasts between the foods of the different courses or dishes of a meal. It is not wise to serve the same food twice at one meal, even though prepared in different ways, nor is it desirable to serve the same preparation twice on any one day.

Take breakfast, for example. If fresh fruits cannot always be served it is better to alternate the fresh fruit with the canned or stewed rather than to have fresh fruit several days in succession followed by canned or stewed for a number of days. The same can be said of cooked and uncooked cereals. There should be variety in the flavor of the food selected. Potatoes, rice and macaroni are all high in starch, all bland in flavor, and resemble each other too closely in consistency and texture to be used at the same meal. When two or more vegetables are used at the same meal, they should be different. Sweet potatoes and white potatoes do not belong in the same meal though they are often served together. They would be much better to serve one of these vegetables and a contrasting vegetable, such as spinach or cabbage. Bland dishes should be supplemented with more highly flavored dishes to relieve monotony.

Variety is also obtained by providing a combination of moist and dry foods. A combination of creamed potatoes and roast beef is less desirable than one of creamed potatoes and broiled steak.

Contrast in temperature of dishes adds interest. In addition to the contrast, the foods should have flavors that go well together. This is where the providers "imagination" comes into play.

GRADUATE SCHOOL TO GRANT PH. D.

During the war period the ideal enrollment up until 1922, the year in which graduate work was organized on a school basis, is given as $96. In the first year of its existence, there were 177 registered in the new school and 42 advanced degrees were conferred.

There is a need for more time, materials, apparatus, and library facilities or the part of the teaching staff, but the most pressing need of this school is for funds for the assistance of promising and worthy students, for many of the best students do not have the resources to go on with this work if they have to provide for their own maintenance. However, a step forward has been made in authorizing the granting of the new degree, and the time is looked forward to when this department will be amply provided for.

Indiana Normal Reunion

Graduates and former students, of the Indiana Normal School, are planning to meet in the grove, just west of the Horticulture Building, next Thursday afternoon, July 24, at four-thirty o'clock for a picnic. Ice cream and refreshments will be served and a enjoyable time is anticipated by the many Indiana students who are attending the present summer session at Penn State.

NITTANY GOLF LINKS SHOW IMPROVEMENT

1889 and probably the most famous golf architect in the world, was secured to lay out the new enterprise. Park laid out the first links to be constructed in this country, those at Schuttie Meadow, New York, and is the designer of the Sunningdale and La Boule, perhaps the best-known in the world.

Park gave special attention to the Nittany course, spending six days at Penn State during the fall of 1922, as it was one of the first college operations which he had designed. His plans call of an entirely new link, only the fairways of the old nine-hole being used, and in order to accommodate the four hundred and sixty yard proposition, the college purchased an additional tract, bringing the total up to over one hundred acres. The up-to-date rolling greens will be well trapped and Park's plans are being carefully followed. The course is expected to be as difficult as any in the state when it is completed next year.

The past season was the third year of regularly organized teams. Last year, however, was the first to order any schedule calling for intercollegiate contests, matches being played with Princeton, Penn. Pitt in addition to a number of contests with local clubs. The team came through the season with only one defeat.

Although four seasons offer slight opportunity for producing a champion several Nittany fans have stepped into the limelight of golfdom. J. W. Crookston, captain of last year's team, has been winning recognition in the amateur field and "Benny" Kindt, captain of this year's aggregation is a holder of the Junior Amateur Championship of Philadelphia.

PENN STATE TO ADMIT 400 MORE FRESHMEN

engineering professions, in chemistry and in education, in mining and metallurgy and in agriculture. There is still an opportunity for the admission of qualified applicants in all these branches at Penn State, for our policy is proportionate distribution through all schools and departments in order to equalize the supply of trained men for industry. As in other years, admissions will be granted until the opening of colleges on September 24th.
