"HIGHER UP"

Dr. John M. Thomas has given Penn State its watchword for the college year of 1621-15. "Higher Up" was the subject of the "Prexy's" address to the stude graduates in the Auditorium on Wednesday arouning. It bespeaks a bright future for this institution in that it seeds advancement in scholarship, conduct, ataletics, college spirit moral standards and spiritual attainment.

No better evidence of physical advancement can be shown than They are the results of more work will stand as the countries of the Penn State of tomorrow; they are the beginning of an "Higher Up" movement.

"The college senate," said Dr. Thomas, "has issued a challenge to higher arholarship." That is the chief call for college students to go higher up. The summons must, and will, be answered. It has become a necessity and the Administration, knowing this, has raised come a necessity and the Administration, knowing this, has raised the graduating standard from sixty to seventy per cent, an increase of ten per cent. With this advance another stone has been laid in the building of the Penn State University.

But schelarship, while of first importance, commands but ordinary attention on the part of the undergraduates. It is not accorded the place which its importance demands. The time is here when the medioere student has a hard time to find his place in the professional world. It is because the demand for exceptionally trained men is because their demand for exceptionally trained men is beerring more acute. Penn State has already met this demand and must continue to do so; that is why the Nittany student must go hicher up in scholarship.

With scholastic endeavor go moral standards and spiritual attripment. One can not survive without the other. It is for the college man and woman of today to link them together and to make the advancement along all lines. A college man is not a finished product valess he has acquired his diploma by the diligent pursual of his religious life as well as his text books.

his redictors life as well as his text books.

Conduct, athletics and college spirit must also be considered in the movement for higher scholastic standards. They are as essential as proper development in learning. No education is complete without proper complesses on the cultivation of good manners and positionalizations. Athletics, too, have a bearing on the full-fledged contenanishees. To go higher up in every undertaking is the aim of Penn State

Penn State has completed scarcely two days of its seventieth uson, A. W. Cowell and S. W. Flotch and already one of the chief issues that annually confronts the undergraduates has been on many tongues.

There has been but little time for preparation for student activities, but the customs of this institution remain the same in their general respects year alter year. Before the student governing bodies, including Student Council, Student Tribunal and Student Board, ather for their first meetings it would be well for the members of these growts to recall to mind the more important issues that were W. H. WEAVER 22 ADDED TO Foremeet among the issues that demand prompt attention by the undergraduates is Stant Night, inaugurated two years ago in the Industrial Engineering course, place of Poster Night. In some respects it is believed that the change was a good one, but on the other hand, much criticism has been directed against the abolishment of Poster Night.

The change was made primarily with the idea of eliminating us. Lea expering and senseless conduct and substituting in their stead a custom based on sanity, usefulness and originality. It was hoped that Steat Night would prove an adequate occasion to impress upon the freshpion the used for correct and appeared by the freshpion the used for correct and appeared by the freshpion the used for correct and appeared by the freshpion the used for correct and appeared by the freshpion the used for correct and appeared by the freshpion the used for correct and appeared by the freshpion the used for correct and appeared by the freshpion the used for correct and appeared by the freshpion the used for correct and appeared by the freshpion the used for correct and appeared by the freshpion the used for correct and appeared to the freshpion the used for correct and appeared to the freshpion the used for the freshpion the used for the freshpion the freshpion the freshpion that the freshpion the used for the freshpion the freshpion that the freshpion the freshpion that the freshpion that the freshpion the freshpion that the freshpion the freshpion that the freshmen the need for correct and approved behavior, and to the freshmen the need for correct and approved behavior, and to the freshmen disgraceful features which brought severe criticism on the college in previous years, was not the rousing success that had |been predicted after it had had a previous trial. Penn State students acre not in general accord as to its merits. The reason for its failure ist year was attributed to the fact that it was not supported by the student bedy. Condemning as it may seem it is true that the underraduates did not turn out in sufficient numbers to make the thing

Directly after Stunt Night last year there was much agitation circulated about the campus to the effect that the old time Poster Nicht wauld be in full swing this year. Already such proposals have been heard again. Any action advocating such a change would be a direct violation of Penn State's progressive policy and would not ters any better than they were three years ago.

... conducted by a corps of men of ability, and supcritical by the undergraduate governing bodies, could be made most instructive to the freshmen as to what constitutes their correct becavier at this justitution.

Custema are not unduly severe at Penn State, but the penalties for violation of the laws are drastic, and are justified. The event of Funt Night should serve to instill in the minds of the freshmen that the customs and traditions of Penn State must be observed, and that one disregard for them will be occasion for punishment. There need to no hoisterous movement of men or any unlawful disregard for the property rights of others to accomplish this.

recre is an exportantly for the incliners of student council to perform a stroke of good work by deciding early in the year just what form the annual observance of this custom shall assume. It matters not what name is applied to the affair, Poster Night, Stunt Night; call it by any name, but let it be "safe and sane," the more safe, the ` ***********************
