SCHOLARSHIP AWARDS

It is often with no conscientious attempt to select the most deserving men and women that the undergraduate votes for his choice of candidates to receive the annual scholarship awards that are made at Penn State. This, in itself, is indeed unfortunate.

Recent elections in the Senior Class resulted in twenty-five candidates being selected for consideration in scholarship awards. These names now go before the faculty scholarship committee for final judgment.

Last year, notes of bitter disappointment were heard from some who thought that they had been overlooked when the awards were made. And it is only natural that a conscientious student would desire to be included among those who were considered eligible for such honors.

The point of the matter lies in the interpretation of what constitutes the best basis on which to bestow these considerations of merit. It is believed that the student who, while maintaining a high standard of scholarship, contributes the most good to the uplifting of the institution, and at the same time presents a needy case for financial support, should receive the first consideration.

The most important time for such a consideration of the merits of the respective candidates is before the undergraduates vote on the men and women. There should be a committee composed of both faculty and undergraduates to investigate the conditions surrounding each candidate for a scholarship award.

There is no doubt but that the faculty committee will carefully and diligently pursue the respective qualifications of the candidates and base its selections accordingly. Such being the procedure there can be no further quibble as to the awarding of these particular scholarships. Here, however, is food for student thought and an opportunity to put into practice that famous line which reads: "None but the best deserve the fair."

THAT PENN STATE "HELLO"

Right now while the freshman is being beset on every side with threats from the upperclassmen and is probably receiving words of counsel from his future fraternity brothers, an opportunity presents itself to add a word of friendly advice that may help mold the yearling into a better Penn State man.

There has been a custom established on this campus which is not uncommon to other institutions requiring that every freshman regard all undergraduates as acquaintances or even as friends. This custom, insignificant as it may seem, is intended to furnish the individual a chance to become more intimately associated with the other fellow. Reference is made to the Penn State "Hello."

It is a custom for all Penn State men, regardless of class or station, to say "Hello" to each other when passing on the street or in the halls or on the campus. But it is more than a custom as applied to freshmen; it is a rule—a law not to be broken without punishment.

Perhaps it is not the freshman's fault that he has not acquired the characteristic manner in which the "Hello" is intended, for upperclassmen are equally as lax in extending this word of greeting and fellowship to each other as are the freshmen.

The "Hello" is not a salutation carrying with it an acknowledgement of submission to upperclassmen. Neither is it a passing word to be spoken in an off-hand manner as though the announcer cared not whether he received a reply. The Penn State "Hello" is intended to create a spirit of cooperation and friendship between all classes and races on the Nittany campus.

It is a sign of recognition, a common word which is embodied in the Penn State spirit, and as such should be highly regarded. "The cheery 'Hello' marks the true Penn State," would be a good slogan for a practice week to re-establish the familiar greeting on the campus. Penn State is a democratic institution. Get the habit of saying "Hello."

SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT WILL INSTALL NEW TANK

A new Imhoff tank, which is expected to increase the capacity fourfold, is being installed at the College sewage disposal plant. The cement base and the sludge beds are nearly completed for the new tank which is expected to be in use by late fall.

GET-TOGETHER HELD BY AG FACULTY MEMBERS

In order that the new members of the faculty of the School of Agriculture might become acquainted with each other, the old members, together with the entire clerical force of the school, held a get-together meeting yesterday afternoon on the lawn in front of the Agricultural Building.

M. M. HARRIS CHOSEN CRITIC OF 1926 LA VIE

Printing Contract May Go to Grit Publishing Company—Art Work Progresses

Professor M. M. Harris has given his consent to act in the capacity of critic for the 1926 La Vie. Professor Harris has spent much of his time in making work and his hopes are that he will be able to complete his contract for the La Vie for the last ten or fifteen years and has always given satisfactory service.

The art work is progressing rapidly and one or two men have been added to the art staff. The only new addition is C. D. Seaman '26, who will work with W. J. Ward '26 and H. F. Bear '26.

The definition of the book is being considered and will be announced in a few days. The individual pictures are being taken and those who have not made their appointments should see the business manager, C. E. McArthur, as soon as possible.

Band Practices New Numbers for Games Outcome of Trip to Atlanta Not Decided—Forty Additional Players Selected

With the outcome of the proposed trip of the Penn State Band to Atlanta still undecided, the Band is practicing a new number of march and popular pieces. Interest is being shown over the possibility of a trip to Georgia by a series of weeks away. The Men's Glee Club is practicing for the Biennial Annual Concert to be given in the Auditorium on the evening of Saturday, November eighth.

GLEE CLUB REHEARSSES FOR PENNSYLVANIA DAY

With Pennsylvania Day but four weeks away, the Men's Glee Club is practicing for the Biennial Annual Concert to be given in the Auditorium on the evening of Saturday, November eighth.

An entirely new program has been selected and the program committee to be one of the most interesting in years. The club has been holding rehearsals twice a week in order to further the effect of the concert.

The Glee Club will have State College on December third for their first road trip. Arrangements for tickets have been completed, and the concert will perform at Emporium, Canoe, and Bradford. Thirty-two men, besides the pianist and violator, will make the trip.

The songs to be used on the trip will be selected numbers from the opera "Pinafore" which was played here last season. Director Grant intends to use a short sketch from the performance in order to work in the best pieces.

ENGINEERING EXTENSION MEN ATTEND MEETINGS

At the annual meeting of the American Railway Association, held at Atlantic City, New Jersey, on October seventh and eighth, the Extension Department was represented by Mr. P. N. Catherman, who has been preparing the new extension course in Electrical Train Operation.

Mr. Catherman appeared before the educational committee and submitted a report showing the progress which the college has made in both of the "E" courses now in the process of preparation, and promised that the courses in Public Utility Courses would be ready early during the coming year.

Professor W. R. Young, also a representative of the department, presented the State Association of Commercial Engineers. Mr. Young spoke before the same body last year and, as a result, considerable demand was stimulated for the various commercial subjects such as bookkeeping, law, and the like, which the Extension Department offers through correspondence.

DEBATING COACHES NAME SEASON'S FORENSIC TOPIC

A meeting of the debating coaches of universities and colleges of Pennsylvania was held at Harrisburg on Saturday, October fourth, to decide the question that is to be debated during the coming season.

The question at issue will be as follows: It is better that Congress should be two-thirds vote, have power to make effective a statute declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court.

On the first or second Friday in December, the initial debate on the Penn State schedule will take place with Washington and Jefferson College. A triangular debate with Dickinson and Bucknell will take place this year, and Coach T. J. Gates is trying to place the University of Pittsburgh on the schedule.

FRESHMEN THROG TO FIRST MASS MEETING

"Buck" Taylor, Head Cheerleader, Urges Yearlings To Give Unbiased Support

Through the forceful efforts of the Sophomore Class, about three hundred members of the class of 1925 attended the First Annual Freshman Mass Meeting last Wednesday evening in the Auditorium.

The meeting was presided over by W. H. Winters '25, president of Student Council. Dean A. H. Warnock was the first speaker and addressed the students on the college and the responsibilities of students in connection with the faculty. Mr. Warnock pointed out to the new men that only one hundred percent effort could they play fair with their professors.

Winters also exhorted the new men to give unbiased support to the faculty and to give unbiased support to the new men that only one hundred percent effort could they play fair with their professors.
