PITT CAGERS OPPOSE PENN STATE QUINTET

(Continued from first page) Circle at Clearfield High has developed a game recently that has compelled attention. Stuckman, Shimer and Noff are in line for sheepskins this time and some counting guard material will be of considerable value in the building of a 1925 quintet.

All the men on this novel five have been out for the squad during the entire season and it is now planned to keep them together in the present team if possible. It is likely that the combination will break into one or more six-man teams during the season and this idea promises to do an excellent job in the development of material for next year's Nittany cage squad.

Team Tests

On Monday of this week, no practice was held for the cagers, the men being allowed to rest after their return from Navy and to begin preparation for the week's examinations. On Tuesday and Wednesday twenty minute scrimmages were held and the rest of the practice period was devoted to instruction, passing and shooting. A light workout last night and a similar drill tonight close the week's program of conditioning for the Pitt contest.

FRESHMAN QUINTET TO TUSSELE WITH PITT CUBS

Collegiate Institute, this second lineup was started at the beginning of hostilities but when Langren was taken out because of fouls, Greene was substituted in his place and flashed an improved grade of basketball for the first of the game. Langren is naturally a rooming guard and is more at home at that position than at center. In addition, Greene has been improving in his play this week and is fighting for his old berth with the first-stringers.

Other Possibilities

With Greene at the tip-off post, the choice for left forward lies between Sammy McLean and Whitley VonNicht. Sammys' has been finishing an excellent floor game in all his appearances this year, but has been woefully weak in scoring points from the field. On the other hand the offense is considerably bolstered with VonNicht playing as the blonde Ephraim presser is a consistent point-getter. In addition he is also a steady performer at the foul line.

Two other possibilities have been drawing considerable attention during the past week by their continued good work. These men are Boepke, substitute forward and Slate, guard. In one practice clash with the first team, these two prospects fully single-handedly kept their team on even terms with Captain Jaton and his mates. Boepke has seen service in every contest played so far, breaking in as a substitute and tomorrow night he may get another chance along with Slate. Both men are excellent shots and are speedy besides.

night and will make the trip to Penn State tomorrow morning. Coach Killinger plans to get some advance information on the Blue and Gold five and will take three of his regulars along with him tonight to view the Pitt players in action.

Under the tutelage of Coach Lou McMahon the Panther freshmen have been establishing new records in their games this winter. Only one contest has been dropped, that being to the veteran aggregation from Bradford High School. The biggest feat accomplished to date was the lacing handed out to the Uniontown High School outfit last week. Previous to this time the Uniontowners had not received a setback in something like forty-five states.

Strong Lineup

Leading the Shenley Park cagers is "Red" McMahon center. McMahon was a member of the championship Allegheny High School fives of the past few years. Supporting him at guards are Robleski and "Wally" Reed. While playing on Coach Killinger's team of last year Robleski played on the Bradford quintet in 1924, while Reed will be remembered for his good work with the Blue and White first-stringers last winter.

The forward berths are held down by two former Homestead mainstays, McGill and Campbell. Homestead won the right to the state championship last season and it was around these two forwards that the whole team was built. Against all opponents this winter, the two Steel City lads have been doing the heavy scoring for their team.

JAN GARBNER ACCEPTS BID FOR JUNIOR PROM

Junior class plans fix about the different college buildings. Nothing like the last suggested program has ever appeared at Penn State, but while it is unusual, yet it is considered entirely appropriate. No action has been taken on programs yet, but the committee will consider them soon after examination week. Nothing further has been done with respect to decorations but a committee has been appointed and will draw plans together in the next future.

NITTANY MATMEN FACE QUAKERS IN HARD MEET

is another veteran and according to Coach Sevalby is one of the best men on his team. Lutz, although listed as a 175 pounder, wrestled 158 against P and M Coach Leonard is willing to see which of these men will be sent to the mat here tomorrow before announcing his selection for the 175 pound berth, the Nittany representative to be chosen from Manning, McAuliffe or Pathmore.

Should Lutz wrestle at 158 pounds it is probable that Jettrott will represent the Red and Blue in the 175 pound division. Birmingham will in all probability be the Nittany candidate in this class although during the past week, the Lion 175 pounder has shown a marked tendency to remain on his feet instead of going to the mat should this fault continue in today's workouts, however there is a chance that another candidate will represent the Blue and White in this class tomorrow.

Scheidt, of Brooklyn is the Quaker candidate who will oppose Prevoist in the unlimited class. Although losing by taking a foolish chance in the meet against Princeton, Scheidt won his bouts against Syracuse and Franklin and Marshall. He is 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs around 195 pounds and is noted as a fighter until the closing bell.

Nittany Team

In speaking of the week's practice just past Coach Leonard remarked that the Lion team does not look as well as it did before the Allentown meet in spite of the fact that two weeks of hard work have been insisted.

The Haberdasher

There is a certain New York magazine "The Haberdasher" that is devoted entirely to clothing. The latest in models and styles are discussed and how they should be worn.

These discussions and advices are given to merchants of clothes and those to whom it may interest for their knowledge of style changes.

These ideas come directly or indirectly from university or college men, which the well dressed men of today monopolize.

So far, to the public eye, these ideas are supposed to originate on the campus of Yale, Harvard, Penn, and Princeton. But do they---all of them?

Decidedly not---Penn State sets her share of individuality, but the world knows little or nothing of it.

Here is your opportunity. We want an article that will give your own opinions of college fads and fancies.

Because the State Shirt Shop is heartily interested in men's clothes and fashions from both the student and merchant viewpoint, it is sponsoring this movement.

Of course only one composition will be published in the March issue of "The Haberdasher," but for the one chosen the State Shirt Shop will give a lounging robe made of imported Persian brocade. "The Haberdasher" will also give a years subscription to their interesting magazine.

Step in and see it---learn further particulars if necessary and then write, not only to gratify a personal compensation, but to place Penn State where it belongs at the head of the criterions of fashion.
