BOOST THE BOND ISSUE

On Tuesday, March twenty-fourth, 1925, the House of Representatives gave its unanimous approval to the eight million dollar bond issue for the expansion of Penn State. That date will stand out in the future as a memorable day in the history of this institution, for it marks the first definite step to end a long period of financial starvation that has hindered the development of the College.

Congratulations are due President Thomas, the Board of Trustees and the supporters of the issue in the Legislature. Their untiring efforts and constant support have led to the passage of the bill that may soon put Penn State in its rightful position as the leading educational institution of the State.

One more step must be taken, however, before the bond issue becomes a fact, the approval of the people of the Commonwealth must be secured. There is a possibility that this step may be taken at the November elections.

While the legislative bodies of the State were considering the passage of this bond issue, the students and alumni of the College were compelled to wait with a feeling of helplessness, for they could rely only on the College leaders to prepare and submit the reports that would enable the legislative assembly intelligently to consider the proposal.

Now that the bill has passed and will be submitted to the people, every Penn State undergraduate, alumnus and faculty member should go out and sell Penn State to his community. The student and alumni bodies of this College can do much to influence the voting public.

Remember! When you go home, boost the bond issue and you boost Penn State!

ON HONOR

More than ever before, sentiment on the Penn State campus favors the institution of a code of honor. Reports submitted by the recent discussion groups evidenced a similar feeling in regard to such a code. This sentiment is not in favor of the re-instatement of the old Honor System, however, nor is the adoption of such a system advocated here. In the words of Dr. S. W. Fletcher, "What we need at Penn State is not an honor system but the spirit and tradition of honor."

The same spirit of fair play which has come to characterize our participation in collegiate athletics should be carried into the examination room, into class politics and into other campus activities. Fifteen years have been necessary to build up Penn State's reputation for clean sportsmanship on the athletic field, it may require more time to develop a tradition of fair play in the class room, but such a tradition is worthy of the effort.

Here lies the opportunity for Student Council. During the past four years, committees from this body have been gathering material for an Honor Code. In June, the last of the four classes engaged in this work will be graduated. With it will go the experience and findings of four years, and unless something is done immediately, the student body will find itself back once more at the starting point. It is extravagant to let pass unheeded this opportunity to begin a worthwhile tradition, it is unfair to the classes that have worked on this problem.

The suggested Honor Code would be a program of education to build up the spirit and tradition of honor upon the Nittany campus, touching all phases of college activity and benefiting students and faculty alike. The material has been gathered. The need is apparent. The students are ready. Yet these favorable conditions will pass unnoticed if Student Council fails to grasp its opportunity to place the subject of a Penn State Honor Code before the student body at once.

WORTHY OF SUPPORT

Led by a desire to see Penn State take its rightful place in the literary world, the local chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary journalistic fraternity, has taken a step forward. After careful consideration, the organization has made plans to publish a literary magazine, "The Old Main Bell," one that will enable students who have literary talent to find a medium for the publication of their work.

Not since the days of the old Blue and White, a literary magazine which failed because of improper organization, has Penn State been represented by a publication of this type. Faculty members have heartily endorsed the new undertaking and have pledged their support. Student leaders have also voiced their approval, but verbal support is not sufficient to insure success. Sincere backing in the form of undergraduate contributions of poetry, short stories and plays is necessary to establish the new project on a firm foundation.

There is no small number of Penn State undergraduates who have attained some degree of success in the literary field. The editors have announced that material for the first issue will be due April sixth. The entire student body should give real support to this new undertaking of Pi Delta Epsilon.

FRESHMAN DEBATERS TO LEAVE ON TRIP MONDAY

Team Opposes Allegheny and Ohio Wesleyan on Question of Capital Punishment

The Penn State College Sunday night, in Penn State to debate with teams from Allegheny, Ohio, and Meadville where the Ohio Wesleyan and Allegheny college debating teams will be encountered on Monday and Tuesday. The Day and White freshmen team will uphold the negative side of the question "Resolved: That capital punishment should be abolished in the United States."

Although the Penn State freshmen have been handicapped by the illness of Coach Mounjoy, they have held their own in practice and during the first debate against Allegheny. This was one of the most extensive trips ever made by a Penn State team and a good showing is expected.

Capital punishment will open the subject for the Penn State team, followed by R. W. Broussard and M. S. Sweeney in the rebuttal on capital punishment. The first debate followed by Sweeney and White, who will complete the rebuttal for the freshmen team. A R. W. Broussard has been selected as alternate.

BLACK AND BRIDLE CLUB PLANS STOCK EXHIBITION

Penn State cultural students and faculty members are preparing to hold a Black and Bridle Club stock exhibition on Monday, March 29, at the International Stock Show at two o'clock in the Stock Pavilion.

The show will consist of "fitting" exhibits which consider the points on the raising of colts, their condition and the methods by which they are ridden. Cash and premium prizes will be awarded to the winner. All entries will be held from college stock and will be judged by a committee of faculty members.

The exhibitors, exhibitors and plans are in the hands of members of the Black and Bridle Club and tonight the club plans to ride a line of horses through the town to advertise the exhibition.

THE LIONS DEN
by DANIEL

THE U. C.'S LAMENT

Oh, freshmen think their life is hard,
And sophomores do too,
But upperclassmen realize
Their joys, alas are few.
They have responsibilities
And cares that weigh them down;
And if you see them here or there,
They wear a thoughtful frown,
And often there are reasons good
Why they should look like this,
For meetings, quizzes, clubs and themes
Don't make a life of bliss.
I'll tell you what the matter is—
You'll find it prevalent
In other schools beside the one
To which you have been sent.
Let MAIL— and boxes sent from home—
We got them freshmen year,
But now they come so seldom, that
We have no cause for cheer.
The only name they can be given
That really does apply,
Is "one-sided epistles"—
I think you know just why.

Advertising in College Papers

—Is like radio broadcasting which is delivered to an unseen audience, and the "broadcaster" knows nothing of the message registration unless responses are sent in.

In December the John Hancock ran in this paper an advertisement headed "Do College Students Read Advertisements?" Here are some of the responses:

"Your advertisement in the Dartmouth was an unusual one, and I want to express my approval."
"If there were more ads like this one you ran in the Princetonian this morning it would be a pleasure to read a paper of nothing but ads!"
"The students here in Hanover do not only read the advertisements but also patronize the advertisers!"
"The advertisement in the Illini is written from the college students' point of view. I believe in insurance because of the sound economic principles which underlie it. There remains then only the kind of policy and the company. What have you got?"

The John Hancock Mutual is particularly interested in literature college boys and women and obtaining ambitious college graduates for the personnel of its field staff.
