W. W. Ellsworth To Speak Here Thursday

Its deductions its art has lost neither its strength nor its distinction will be traced and explained by Mr. Ellsworth with an eloquence inherited from a long line of famous Americans and achieved by dint of devoted research.
Art of Shakespeare
Mr. Ellsworth's evening lecture will be a thorough review of Shakespeare and his times. Although the Shakespearean drama has always enjoyed popular success, the development of the modern theatre has made the study of the serious drama peculiarly impressive.
It will be strange to note the strides the stage has made in theatrical effects. Mr. Ellsworth made an intense personal tour of the theater district Shakespeare once knew. His theme "Shakespeare and Old London" is of considerable local interest. In view of the imputed recent dramatic tourney at Penn State gave to Pennsylvania college dramatists, the exposition is particularly apt.
Vivid Speaker
Years of experience with the Century magazine and an earnest admiration for literature have helped make Mr. Ellsworth a vivid speaker and author. He is a grandson of Noah Webster and a great-grandson of Chief Justice Oliver Ellsworth, friend of the Connecticut compromiser that solved a difficult controversy in the adoption of the nation's constitution.

Lion Passers Defeat Bisons in Loose Match

general was not steady. Flashes of brilliant playing were exhibited here and there but it was marred by bad passing and poor shooting.
MacDonald continued to show steady improvement taking high honors for scoring. He exhibited clever floor work attitudes but was outjumped by Bach at Bucknell. Hood scored a pair of long shots but was outpointed by three men on the team.
Opportunities for scoring were passed up when the guards failed to notice Hood and Roeske open in the corners with an opportunity to score. Misplays of this sort caused the Nittany five a number of possible baskets.

Barron, although guilty of a number of errors, played a close guarding game allowing his man to score only one basket during the whole game. Whitey Von Neida did not play his usual brand of basketball although he showed occasional flashes of brilliant playing.
In the beginning of the second half with the score at 19-12 in favor of the Blue and White, MacDonald on a clever play got the ball after the tip-off and scored his third goal. Most of his goals were scored under the baskets when he followed up long attempts.
With the score at 30-23, the game rose to feverish excitement. Neither team was able to score in the rough scrimmage that followed. Despite the fact that a number of players tripped and fell in their almost mad dashes for the ball, there was little fouling.
MacDonald at this stage of the game shot one in from under the basket and goals by Barron and Hood together with a foul by the Penn State center boosted the score to 39 as the game ended.
Murphy, football and baseball star, was the outstanding man for the Orange and Blue, scoring five field goals and making a perfect score from the foul line. McCaskey, forward on Musser's combination, played a fast game and was responsible for three baskets.

Upperclassmen Reveal To Kaufman's Music

Jacob Silverstein of Wilkes-Barre, who has been selected to decorate the Armory, will start work this morning. He has secured permission to remove the boxing ring at the end of the building, thereby greatly facilitating arrangements and also adding to the appearance of the floor.

Decorations

The design that will be used consists of a lattice ceiling composed of fireproof bunting in the center of the building with the class colors, blue and gold, predominating. The squares between the strips of bunting will be filled with Southern Smilax which will be arranged to hang below the ceiling. The sides of the ceiling will be covered with a draped border from the central design to the walls, about eight feet from the floor.

In order to improve the sides of the building the walls will be completely screened by heavy white sheeting, decorated with blue bunting. Each fraternity booth will be separated with oak branches. With an attractively decorated sounding box as a background, the orchestra will be placed upon a platform near the end of the hall.
A canopy, which will be illuminated by means of electric stars and lights suspended from the edge of the structure, will be erected at the front entrance. A single continuous string of lights suspended from the edge of the lattice work and border will be used for interior illumination.
